Dear Mr. Isaacs,

I have just been reading a very depressing letter from my wife about my Dauphine, after paying its full purchase price, I am about to lose or have lost simply because I made the grave error of believing that you regarded me as a friend in the same sense in which I took you for a friend.

Your records will show that unlike many of your customers

I have played the game with, in addition to paying hundreds into your business. But the moment I am out of your sight, you do not hesitate to handle my wife like a hateful stranger and are prepared to have me lose a large sum of money because I have not yet paid you a lousy C40
