There is no doubt in the minds of many of us that SWA and "the People's Liberation Army of Namibia" are destined to vanquish the Pretoria forces and seize back their country.

Canndee Chaim. it is a great pleasure for me, personally, for the members of the National Executive Committee and the heads of various departments of the MG and our Movement 83 a. whole, heads of various organisations, to be participants, however briefly, at this meeting -- if only because it has together the people, the comrades, the workers who between them constitute the majority of our liberation movement, the ..

* authentic voice of the fighting people of our country. But, surely, we wish to welcome you, especially those comrades who have come in from remote areas, attending a conference of supreme importance for the future conduct of our revolutionary struggle.

The African National Congress has called this conference of the Department of Information and Publicity at a most crucial time in our liberation struggle - a time when the helium of our liberation is being lit by the rays of a new dawn; a time when, after struggling through centuries in the dark tunnel of colonial and racial domination. national oppression and "commie" exploitation, 33 people have now seen the light and we know that no force can indefinitely postpone the historic moment of victory because there is: no force more powerful than the spirit of a people who have been doomed to endure banning, torture, imprisonment, wage-slavery and massacres as the price of freedom, of liberation.

Our people have been the victims of these crimes at the hands of the Pretoria apartheid regime over a period of 40 decades. Despite these crimes, however, indeed even because of them, the liberation struggle has gained in strength and effectiveness. Resistance to apartheid measures has been heightened at national and local community levels. The workers' movement, consistently militant, is closing its ranks and consolidating a united force which has further alarmed the fascists into threatening to confront the workers with police brutality. And not only this: our brutally exploited workers have the potential power to reduce racist South Africa's economy to a shambles as part of the struggle for a 21st century: socio-economic order in our country. For the exploiters, this is a frightening prospect

It must therefore be a DIP that critically examines the traditional structures of media institutions guided by the essence of the media as a political instrument of the contending parties in this conflict.

It must seek to anchor itself deeply amongst the people of our country, creating true communication amongst our various communities and between these communities and their leadership in the AND. It must further seek to create communication and a truthful awareness between our struggling people and the allies in the worldwide anti-imperialist front.

It must therefore be a DIP whose cadre has chosen sides in this conflict. a cadre that has chosen the side of the oppressed sections of our people, one that has chosen the struggle for progress. It must be one that measures to the challenges of modern day communication and technological warfare and masters the art of revolutionary propaganda in conditions of national liberation struggle. Obviously this can not be the cadre that is ready-made and packaged. It is a cadre that the ANC itself must develop.

Our struggle for national liberation takes place within the context of the international struggle between the forces of progress, freedom and independence for all nations, big or small, and the forces of reaction, imperialism, exploitation and colonialism. Since Our struggle is anti-colonial and anti-imperialist in essence, it goes without saying that we are allied to all anti-imperialist forces in the world.

Our Movement, the ARC, has consistently and steadfastly supported the ideal of a strong and united QAU. After the highly successful Summit held in Addis Ababa last month, we are confident that the CHU will take the lead in its stride as it proceeds to focus its attention and direct its energies to the undeclared war unleashed by the Pretoria colonialists on member states of the OAU in Southern Africa, and the bitter struggles by SHAPO and the AND for the total liberation of Africa.

The war of destabilisation against independent States includes a hysterical and frantic campaign directed at the MIC which, prescribed by the regime in 1960, has now come alive in the hearts and minds of the people and the oppressed alike. The ARC is the subject of daily comment by the leading spokesmen of the regime; it is the object of persistent threats of assassination and massacre against its members wherever they may be; the ANC has become the pretext for acts and threats of aggression by the regime against independent Africa. The regime has placed the ANC at the heart of its problems in Southern

It is in this context that we should look at this conference of the DIP. The conference has the task of putting its finger on the pulse of our DIP. We should identify the problem areas and propose ways and means of remedying some of the problems and difficulties which have confronted our information movement. The task that confronts this conference is not an easy one, the difficulties and problems are manifold, yet not insurmountable. The resolution of these problems will surely go towards making our propaganda, department a mighty weapon in the hands of the struggling people of South Africa. We must put our propaganda on a war-footing; we must chart new ways and means of moving forward to victory - victory for our country, our continent and for Humanity.

Hearing referred to some of the tasks facing us, it becomes imperative that we define the nature and essence of our department of information. In doing so, we need also to define the qualities desired of a specialist cadre of the DIP. Our point of departure in defining the nature of the department must be the nature of the conflict in South Africa, and the nature of our movement, the ANC.

The nature of the conflict in South Africa is one of a struggle between the forces of Fascist Oppression and racist exploitation whose method is war and aggression directed against our people and neighbours, which forces are led by the Nationalist Party of South Africa, and Helen, on the one hand, and the forces of national liberation, social and cultural emancipation led by the ANC on the other hand. In short a struggle between violent imperialist reaction and revolutionary promise.

Given that our movement is a uniting force, an organiser, a mobiliser and an educator and leader of the widest sections of our people, the DIP must of necessity be a finely tuned political instrument that clearly and comprehensively grasps the overall task of the ANC and its role and place in the struggle of our people for their national rights in particular, and the general struggle of humanity for a just, peaceful and prosperous world.

By its very nature, therefore, our media, organised in the DIP, can only and must be a partisan media, deriving its objectivity from its politically principled position, representing historical truth and a real and correct orientation.
