

Studies on the South African Media

These three books examine the currents of struggle within media structures, debunk myths such as the "Afrikaner" or "Oppenheimer" conspiracies, and look at South African society in terms of both class and racial conflict. They provide source material not only for the student of media but also for anyone interested in the South African situation.

The Press in South Africa is the first book to offer an historical overview of the press in relation to political economy. The book offers a conceptual framework for media analysis, followed by case studies dealing with the long running battle between Nasionale Pers and Perskor, the press and educational reform, labour reporting and the role of the press on issues of black housing.
0-85255-310-2 £8.95

Broadcasting in South Africa examines the history of the broadcast media, both radio and television, in enhancing and creating the "general affairs" and "own affairs" cultures required by the National Party for their continued dominance. The book examines struggles within the SABC, the reasons for and content of TV2/3, the role of soap operas in ideological legitimation and the way in which broadcasting technology has been shaped for political ends.
0-85255-311-0 £9.95

The Alternative Press in South Africa focuses on the history of "black" newspapers from the missionary press, linking the struggles of this press and its editors to contemporary publishing ventures by oppressed communities, trade unions and the student presses. It also offers an historical overview of the black Media Workers Association and its role in questioning conventional newsgathering and reporting.
0-85255-312-9 £9.95

The editors and authors of the three volumes have written extensively on media, cultural studies and contemporary South Africa. Keyan Tomaselli is Director of the Contemporary Cultural Studies Unit at the University of Natal; Ruth Tomaselli, a development studies graduate, is a senior student at the same university, and Johan Muller is senior lecturer in Education at the University of the Witwatersrand. All three have experience in professional media production, an experience they have brought to bear on their analyses.

Other contributors to the three volumes include geographers Jeff McCarthy and Michelle Friedmann, sociologist Simon Burton, media teachers Graham Hayman, Don Pinnock, Mikki van Zyl and Les Switzer, journalists Lew Raubenheimer, Shaun Johnson, Leandra Elion and Bridget Hilton-Barber, research students Abner Jack and Nofikile Nxumalo, and educationalist Nhlangu Ngcobo.

James Currey

54b Thornhill Square, Islington, London N1 1BE 01-609-9026 Fax 01-609-9027
Booktrade orders A.A. Distribution Services Ltd, Dunhams Lane, Letcliff or Third World Publications (Co-op) Ltd, 151 Stratford Road, Birmingham B3 7LF £9.95

Broadcasting in

South Africa

Tomaselli, Tomaselli
& Muller

Broadcasting in South Africa

Keyan Tomaselli · Ruth Tomaselli · Johan Muller

Contents

1. Broadcasting Technology as an Ideological Terrain. Some Concepts, Assumptions and Problems 1

Graham Hayman and Ruth Tomaselli

Levels of Broadcasting, levels of ideology – How and where is ideology identifiable in broadcasting. What definition of ideology should be used to analyse broadcasting. Broadcasting in Modern Urban Societies. Common Pattern in the Development of Radio – The development of radio communication up to 1922. The Institutionalising of Broadcasting: 1922-1927. Stages of Development. The Relationship between Radio Communications Systems and a Capitalist Mode of Production. Characteristics of Different Transmitter Frequencies. Encoding Method. Frequency Band and channel width. Factors Affecting Network design. Transmitters. Landlines. Studios. Receivers. Language. Per Capita Income of the Target Audience. The Ideology of Broadcast Technology.

2. Ideology and Technology in the Growth of South African Broadcasting, 1924-1971 23

Graham Hayman and Ruth Tomaselli

Licensing the Broadcasters 1924-1936. Technology. Programmes. The Local Imitation. Attempts to Find Consensus: 1936-1948. Technology I: Are Transmitters Impartial and Bilingual Technology II: Production. Technology III: Expansions, Improvements. Legal Controls. Finances. Programmes: What did They Say. Programmes: Stabilising Black Labour. Under Smuts' Control. The Schoch Commission. The Last Attempt at 'Impartiality': 1948-1959. Finance: The Commercialisation of the SABC – Springbok Radio. Programmes I: Drawing in the Black Audience. Programmes II: The Chessboard of Power. Finances: What Went Wrong. Professionalisation and Polarisation: 1959-1971. Legislation: The Granting of Carte Blanche. Finances: The Midas Touch. Management and Staff: The Centralisation of Power. Technology: Bigger is Better. Technology II: Automatic Entertainment. Technology III: Advertising South Africa. Programmes I: Attracting the Youth Market. Programmes II: Redefining the National Interest. Programmes III: Reaching the Black Working Class. Conclusion. Summary of Legislation Affecting Broadcasting in south Africa, 1910-1978.

3. Between Policy and Practice in the SABC, 1970-1981 84

Keyan Tomaselli and Ruth Tomaselli

The Political Economy of Broadcasting. Party Political Favourites. The SABC and the Concept of Truth. Editorial Comment: 'the facts behind the facts'. Black Broadcasting: Models for Class Behaviour. The Engineering of Consent on Radio Bantu. Reinforcing Traditional Tribal Values. The Socialisation of 'Economically Dynamic' Subjects. Maintaining Equilibrium with the Apartheid Lexicon. Radio Bantu and Ideology. The Maintenance of the White Ruling Class on Radio. Religious Programmes: Displacing Social Anxiety. Radio Today: An Island of Critical Expression. Television Broadcasting: What Rules Do we Play. Ensuring Suitability: The Selection and Control of personnel and Programmes. The Imposition of Consensus. Formal Gatekeeping Mechanisms: Magazines and Documentaries. resistance to Consensus. Covert Gatekeeping Mechanisms. Crew Leaders: Surveillance by 'Subjects'. Budgets: Financing Ideological Practice. The Status of 'Socially Relevant' English Television Programmes. Series, dramas and Social Issues. Winning Consent for the SADF. Reflections of Class and Class Restructuring. The Commercial Music Radio Stations. Relatively 'Independent' Capital Radio.

4. Square Vision in Colour: How TV2/3 Negotiates Consent 153

Keyan Tomaselli, Graham Hayman, Abner Jack, Nofikile Nxumalo, Ruth Tomaselli and Nhlanhla Ngcobo

Permanent Urbanisation and the strategy of Co-optation. 'Internal Shadows of Exclusion, The Intertextual Relations of TV2/3. 'Magazines': A Sort of Actuality-Narrative. Television Narrative: Contradictions Within the Dominant Discourse. Disintegration/Integration – From Rural to Urban Values. Conclusion.

5. Trauma by Installment: Springbok Radio Soap Operas 177

Mikki van Zyl and Leandra Elion

Theories of Feminism. Hegemonic struggle and Consent. Repression and Counter-Ideology. Gender or Class Patriarchy. Reproduction of Ideology of Gender. Representation of Reality. Interpellation: Sex and Society. The Manufacture of Discourses. General Mode of Production: general Ideology and the Text. The Literary Mode of Production: General Ideology. The Literary Mode of Production: Authorial Ideology and Production. Images of War. The Literary Mode of Production: Consumption. Text: Narrative Structure, Genre. Process of Interpellation. Processes of Signification. Conclusion.