COMMUNICATION IN WRITING (40 marks)

Answer Question 1 and Question 2

Do not write in excess of the number of words indicated. Writing at greater length will almost invariably lead to loss of quality and difficulties in completing the paper. Leave yourself time to check your writing carefully.

You will be rewarded for orderly and coherent presentation of material, use of an appropriate style and accuracy in spelling, punctuation and grammar.

- 1. Write about 250 words on one of the following:
- Either (a) The trouble caused by the loss of a small item such as a key, a ticket or a passport.
 - or (b) A person performs a small act of kindness (e.g. gives a lift in his car; finds and returns a diary which has been mislaid; helps some school-fellow who is having difficulty with some subject). Give an account of the unexpected results of such kindness.

3. COMPREHENSION AND DIRECTED WRITING (40 makrs)

Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions (a) to (k) which follow it.

I never met a more interesting man than Mayhew. He was a lawyer in Detroit, an able and successful one. By the time he was thirtyfive he had a large and lucrative practice, and he stood on the threshold of a distinguished career. He had an acute brain, an attractive personality and uprightness. There was no reason why he should not become, financially or politically, a power in the

One evening he was sitting in his club with a group of friends and they were perhaps a little the worse for liquor. One of them had recently come from Italy and he told them of a house on a hill, 10 overlooking the Bay of Naples, with a large and shady garden. He described to them the beauty of the most beautiful island in the Mediterranean.

'It sounds fine,' said Mayhew. 'Is that house for sale?'

'Everything is for sale in Italy,' replied his friend.

'What, in heaven's name, would you do with a house in Capri?'

'Live in it,' said Mayhew.

He sent for a cable form, wrote it out and despatched it. In a few hours the reply came back. The offer was accepted.

Mayhew was no hypocrite and he made no secret of the fact that he would never have done so wild a thing if he had been sober, but 20 when he was, he did not regret it. He was neither an impulsive nor an emotional man, but a very honest and sincere one. He had made up his mind to do exactly as he had said. He did not care for wealth and he had enough money to live on in Italy. He thought he could do 25 more with life than spend it on settling the trivial quarrels of unimportant people. He had no definite plan. He merely wanted to get away from a life that had given him all it had to offer. I suppose his friends thought him crazy; some must have done all they could to dissuade him. He arranged his affairs, packed his furniture 30 and started.

Capri is a gaunt rock of austere outline, bathed in a deep blue sea; but its vineyards, green and smiling, give it a soft and easy grace. From his windows, which overlooked the bay of Naples, Mayhew say a hundred places that recalled the Romans and the Greeks. The place began to haunt him. Everything he saw for the first time (for he had never been abroad before) excited his fancy; and in his soul stirred the creative imagination. He was a man of energy. Presently he made up his mind to write a history. For some time he looked about for a subject and at last decided on the second century 40 of the Roman Empire. It was little known and it seemed to offer problems similar to those of our own day.

He began to collect books and soon he had an immense library. His legal training had taught him to read quickly. He settled down to work. At first he was accustomed to foregather in the evening with the painters, writers and suchlike who met in the tavern near the Piazza, but presently he withdrew himself as his absorption in his studies became more pressing. He was accustomed to bathe in that bland sea and to take long walks among the pleasant vineyards, but little by little, grudging the time, he ceased to do so. 50

He worked harder than he had ever worked in Detroit. He would start at noon and work all through the night till five o'clock more significant, and he imagined a work that would put him for ever beside the great historians of the past. As the years went by he was seldom in the ways of men. He could be tempted to come out of his house only by a game of chess or the chance of an argument.	55

When he first came to the island he was a big brawny fellow with thick black hair and a black beard and of a powerful physique, but gradually his skin became pale and waxy; he grew thin and frail. Neither illness nor lassitude, however, prevented him from going on with his work. For fourteen years he toiled unremittingly. He made thousands and thousands of notes. He sorted and classified them. He had his subject at his finger ends and at last he was ready to begin. He sat down to write. He died.	65
That vast accumulation of knowledge is lost for ever. Vain was that ambition, surely not an ignoble one, to set his name beside those of other distinguished historians. And yet to me his life was a success. The pattern is good and complete. He did what he wanted and he died when the goal was in sight and never knew the bitterness of an end achieved.
