14 111AL 01111111111115 ;

The General Service has been considering the circumstances, and it's out of the most to provide broadcast of a reasonable standard aimed at informing, educating and entertaining the listener.

However, it is certain that there is plenty of room for improvement

But it must be appreciated that due to the present lack in all spheres of experienced staff (and indeed the acute staff shortage) it will take all the efforts of existing staff members to continue to provide the present service, and no great improvement or new developments can be expected.

Until we can begin to attract staff of a high calibre, and hold them, we will just continue to jog along at our present pace and indeed we will have trouble to keep up our present output

What is required is a drastic review of conditions of service and if this is not forthcoming in the near future it is feared that we shall continue to lose staff to commercial enterprises, and we are at the stage now when further staff losses can only be dangerous to the service and put its operation in jeopardy.
