| whisked away from the

Harare International Airport, to the disappointment of the assembled Press corps.

The South African politician, who arrived in a light aircraft, is in the country at the invitation of President Mugabe. The two men are scheduled to hold discussions today on a variety of issues, including the on-going constitutional talks and the high level of violence.

Mr Buthelezi, chief minister of the KwaZulu homeland in South Africa in addition to being leader of millions of supporters, mostly Zulus, in his Inkatha Freedom Party, was not given an opportunity to speak to reporters who had awaited his arrival.

Buthelezi jets in

Before his aircraft arrived,
Minister of Foreign Affairs
Nathan Shamuyarira, through a ministry spokesman, told the contingent of journalists at the airport that reporters were barred from interviewing Chief Buthelezi until after he had met
Mr Mugabe. 7

The spokesman did not disclose the reasons behind the ministry's directive. However, speculation was rife last night
over the ministry's move..

It was being suggested in some circles that the government did not wish to allow Chief Buthelezi, who is well-known for his outspokenness in advancing his political ideas, to disclose his agenda in advance of his meeting with the President.

Mr Buthelezi was accompanied by high-ranking officials in his party. They included Mr Frank Mdlalose, the party's national chairman, and Mr Simon Gumede, the party's deputy secretary-general and also Minister of Works in the KwaZulu government.

Also in the delegation are: Mr Dennis Madide, a member of the Inkatha central committee and KwaZulu Minister of Finance; Lionel Mtshali, KwaZulu Minister of Education and Culture; Mr Ben Ngubane, the Minister of Health, and Mr Joseph Mathews, Chief Buthelezi's legal adviser.

This is Chief Buthelezi's first official visit to Zimbabwe, which has regarded him as a collaborator with the apartheid government. Ao

The scheduled meeting today is at the invitation of President Mugabe, who, as chairman of the Frontline States, was asked by the Ad Hoc Committee on Southern Africa in the Organisation of African Unity to help reconcile the differences among black leaders in South Africa.

The attempted bombing of a crowded Bellevue, Johannesburg, restaurant on Saturday night was part of an offensive by the Azanian People's Liberation Army against soft targets, police said yesterday.

Three people were arrested at a games hall in Rokeby Street on Saturday night. Police said they were in possession of a stick grenade, 250 of Russian-made TNT explosive and 1kg of plastic explosive. The plastic was packed with 8-inch nails for maximum effect.

The Chinese stick grenade was detonated in a controlled explosion by bomb disposal experts at the corner of Bedford and Hopkings streets, Yeoville, at about 9.30 pm on Saturday.

Yesterday, police detonated the plastic explosive in front of members of the media at a remote shooting range near Eldorado Park. It was a huge blast, even out in the open.

Atrocity

Another man was arrested and more weapons were seized in a follow-up operation which resulted in a shootout in Soweto late on Saturday night.

Law and Order Minister Hernus Kriel said indications were that Apla members were involved in the bombing attempt and police action may have prevented another massacre or atrocity by this organisation.

It is believed the bomb was meant for Rokerfalia, which is usually packed over weekends. The games hall is next to the restaurant.

Spokesman for SAP public relations headquarters in Pretoria, Colonel Johan Mosebert, said Rokerfalia had been the initial target, but the men apparently noticed police there and had moved off to the games ball stand.

He said they were arrested as they approached the hall to place their bomb,

A spokesman for Rockerfella said that if the bomb had gone off in the games hall, the restaurant would have been badly hit

THE STAR. MONDAY 21 MAY 1993

Mostert said if the explosives had gone off, the damage would have been a horror-

ful, and that police had averted a possible blood-bath.

Mostert said members of the Crime Combating and Investigation (CCI) unit of the SAP investigating the activities of Apla kept a watch on the restaurant on Saturday night and arrested the men,

Mostert told The Star that police believed the men were acting as part of an Apla unit,

In follow-up investigations during the night, police went to a house in Diepkloof, Soweto.

When police tried to gain entrance to the house they found a trap. During the ensuing fight, a man was wounded and arrested. Police seized an R-4 rifle with magazine and ammunition, an AK-47 rifle with magazine and ammunition, two Chinese stick grenades and an R-1 rifle grenade of SADF origin, the statement said.

He told The Star more arrests could be expected.

He said this was the second group to be arrested in a week.

Last week, he said, a group was arrested in Natal and, during interrogation, police established that several public bars and restaurants had been targeted for attack.

The arrests on Saturday had been a direct result of the Natal interrogation, Mostert said.

Kriel said in a statement:
The incidents once again fully justify last week's actions by the SAP against the PAC and Apla.

Reacting to the events, PAC legal head Willie Serliti told Sapa his organisation did not know what evidence police had to conclude that Apla members were involved in the foiled attack

He said the PAC had no knowledge of the men alleged to be implicated in the attack, and reiterated that Apla was a component structure of the PAC and had its own agendas.

Apla headquarters in Dar

es Salaam could not be contacted yesterday.

Police have appealed for anyone with information to call the Crime-Stop number 0-200-11-12-13

COMMENT |
AWB ally

WE see nothing wrong with Afrikaners forming the Afrikaner Volksfront to demand self-determination and a volkstaat.

They have a democratic right to organise a | power bloc, just as any other section of the .

DM MmNy,

see nothing wrong with the Volksfront staging mass marches, provided they are peaceful and the marchers are not armed, for if the ANC is allowed to have mass marches, why shouldnâ\200\231t the Volksfront?

We see nothing wrong with the Volksfront staging mass action, if it so wishes (even though we are dead against this form of protest) as long as the ANC stages mass action and the government does nothing to stop it from doing so.

We see nothing wrong with General Costand Viljoen, former chief of the South African Defence Force, heading the Volksfront, together with other former army and police generals, since General Magnus Malan, former SADFE chief, became a long-semngâ\200\230 Cabinet Minister without any murmur from, those who now condemn Gen Viljoen's entry: into politics.

However, we have strong misgivings when Gen Viljoen joins a parade of armed, uniformed, helmeted or hooded AWR members with their Nazi-style insignia, as he did in Pretoria on Saturday.

Indeed, it places a big question mark over the Volksfront and Gen Viljoen himself, since the AWR is about as bad an ally or associate as any democratic movement could have.

The excuse for having the AWR as a member of the front is that the frontâ\200\231s aim is to include as many Afrikaner organisations and unions as possible that support self-determination.

So if there is going to be unity, and each constituent body will follow its own policy, why exclude the AWR?

The answer is that the AWR is a neo-Nazi movement which runs its own private army of Wenkommandos and Ystergarde, an orga misation whose leader, Mr Eugene Terre-Blanche, constantly warns will make war on the ANC should the ANC come to power.

It may be a lot of hot air. On the AWB's men are well-trained and armed, and it does not need 3 vast num men, trained and armed, to become my than a nuisance, as the 11 000 Umkhon Sizwe cadres showed.

Gen Viljoen warned on Saturday that 3 he on collision would follow if the govt
and the negotiation forum atte
Whites to a unitary state.

He told the 5 000 crowd to prepare the for self-defence. There might be a struggle. If we have to sacrifice ourse our cause is just :

But he added: 'If we should take to we
it would be a very great disaster.'

Despite his warnings, he still wants his hope
a political settlement. !

Mr Terre Blanche, with his customary b erence, said: 'Let my people go. If yo not let my people go to their own land promise you there will be war.'

The AWB leader offered troops if Gen
joen chose to fight. 'If you want to fight general, I will be your corporal. Gene thousands of AWE members are yours.'

Meanwhile, the Volksfront is to recruit its members to build up its strength for ne tions.

But it should be warned: 'The AWB link frighten away moderate Right-wingers
other people who are looking for lea and a home in this time of crisis, but go along with the National Party seeming alliance with the ANC, .

The AWB link will also be exploited National Party and the government in same way as pictures of a masked AWE and references to the AWB were panic voters into the Yes camp in the end.

Since we believe Gen Viljoen is a man of integrity and high principle, we think should consider whether his false ne

AWB. or whether he should jettison |
the greater good of the people which h
to the wmg.smt I :
