Therefore, the time is now for us to elevate the level of support to the liberation movements by consolidating our forces, raising our voices and pursuing concrete actions to expose and bring to a halt our government's unacceptable behavior.

We are not do-gooders, however. If it is our aim, through this conference, to develop and implement strategies in support of the official liberation policies and programs of the ANC and SWAPO, we proceed with a keen sense of our own self-interest as people of the United States in aiding the Southern African peoples' struggles. We know, because documentation abounds, that the same companies which are exploiting the labor of Southern Africans are putting people out of work in the U.S., and we understand the symbiotic relationship between these domestic and foreign corporate operations. We also know that the billions of dollars invested by U.S. multinational corporations like IBM and General Motors in the apartheid economy would be better spent on improving the lives of U.S. citizens than on enhancing white privilege and reinforcing black oppression in Southern Africa.

Apprised of these realities, we recognize that even though the bread-and-butter issues that are multiplying almost daily here at home must command our attention, we must simultaneously intensify pressure on the U.S. government and the corporate sector to end their relations with the apartheid regime.

The format of the Conference in Solidarity With the Liberation Struggles of the Peoples of Southern Africa has been designed to maximize productivity and to give an ongoing character to the work of the conference. It is our intention that out of this meeting will come regional and national strategies for involving much larger numbers of U.S. people in a campaign aimed at

- * the total isolation of South Africa;
- * the immediate withdrawal of South Africa from Namibia;
- * reinforcement of the mandatory arms embargo to render it more effective and to include nuclear collaborations;
- * the adoption and implementation by the U.N. of comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa, including an effective oil embargo;
- * the severance of all cultural and sporting links with South Africa;
- * increasing political support and material assistance to the people of Namibia through SWAPO and the people of South Africa through the ANC;
- * increasing political support to the Frontline States in the face of mounting attempts by South Africa to destabilize them.

We look forward to your attendance at this historic conference, and to your active participation in its vitally important work.
