Mr. B. Turok,

19th October, 1977.

Dear Ben,

I have now had a chance to speak to my colleagues in Geneva concerning the proposals you put to me on the 23rd September.

I am pleased to be able to tell you that we accept the proposals you have made with enthusiasm. You may feel assured in your dealings with the Open University Association of University Teachers that we would be willing to support such a venture both financially and in relation to identifying appropriate candidates for your courses.

We feel that the extension of Open University tuition to South African victims of apartheid both inside and outside South Africa would be a significant contribution to the eventual liberation of Southern Africa. I hope that your colleagues in the Association of University Teachers will share this view.

I shall be away from the office for some five weeks as from today but in my absence you might like to contact Veronica Denby if there are urgent matters which require our consideration.

We had of course thought along the lines of a limited number of individual awards to students for an initial year in order that we might judge how effective the scheme was likely to prove. Perhaps your own negotiations with the Open University Vice Chancellor and University Secretary might also stress the importance of a trial run?

I gather that the next step is to draw up a resolution for Senate and I wish you luck in this!

With sincere best wishes.

Yours sincerely,

J. Landymore
