You too can get it from the horseâ\200\231s mouth!

Whether you are a worker or a student, an academicora manager, a political leader or a grassroots organiser, you should be reading the South African Labour Bulletin. After 18 years of publication, we believe we are still the most important labour journal in the country. But donâ\200\231t take our word forit.

Read what other people have to say about the Bulletin:

â\200\230The SA Labour Bulletin has a very high reputation internationally and deservedly s o. -

| wish there were equivalents to the Labour Bulletin in other countries.â\200\235

â\200\231 - Denis Mac Shane, International Metalworkers' Federation

"Anyone who wants to know what labour is thinking should read the Labour Bulletin.â\200\231
- Jay Naidoo, COSATU

â\200\230The Labour Bulletin is essential reading.â\200\231 - Jenny Cargill, Finance Week

â\200\230For any manager serious about engaging the labour movement, the Bulletin is compulsory reading.â\200\231

- Bobby Godsell, Anglo American L â\200\230No trade unionist, or any other person who has an interest in South African labour issues,

can do without the Labour Bulletin.â\200\231

- Cunningham Ngcukana, NACTU :

â\200\230In its field, the Bulletin is without peer ..." - Andre Lamprecht, Barlow Rand
