To me, the Black people of Africa are millions of years old. The whites, like P. W. Bothen, are only hundreds of years old. Let old wisdoms prevail.

To regress to the days of Dwight Eisenhower and V.P. Richard Nixon, and the era of Joe McCarthy and Communism, America has a phobia - an unreleastic one from my point of view, but real, nonetheless. Senator Jesse Helms of North Carolina is a good example; even if a poor one; an example, nonetheless.

I could continue writing metaphors to you, but I won't.

You want your country? I'll tell you how to get and have it. Your allotted time is very short, and your action is needed now!

Using your best public relations possible, contact Senator Richard Lugar, Republican from Indiana; invite him to Zambia, treat him and his entourage with respect, but do not placate! Explain to him that you really wish to be allied with the interwoven Capitalistic societies, but due to the white societies and secret white societies in South Africa, the apparent solution to date to wrest away the power of these societies has only been in a form of Communism.

(Society owning everything, only then to be redistributed in a different form later.)

Ask him for help. Explain to him that the Black people are friendly and that they will eventually overcome all obstacles to gain freedom from an oppressive government. Isn't that what the U.S. did when they declared their independence from England?

Explain to Richard Lugar that there will be independence and liberty for all; blacks, whites, and coloreds!

Also, explain that you realize that the U.S. and Western Europe happen to be South Africa's biggest cash customers for South Africa's resources; and there is a South African transition going on, that you wish it to be short and nondisruptive. Tell him of your need for financial aid and moral assistance to bring this about.

Remind Mr. Lugar that apartheid is an embarrassment to the U. S. and that the artificial support of Mr. P. W. Bothen is reprehensible!

To the average U. S. citizen, it brings up the Civil Rights movement of the '60's and '70's in the U.S. and the deaths of John F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King, and Robert Kennedy.

What does the U.S. want? No one likes problems! They want things to be smooth and on an even keel. The fact of the matter is sometimes it takes money to make money, with as few disruptions as possible.
