MARCH 21 1992

SOUTH AFRICA is on the brink of the most crucial phase in its political history.

- The Conference for a Democratic South Africa — CODESA I — on December 21 1991, was the historical breakthrough.
- CODESA II, set for the last week of April, will bring South Africa to the threshold of multi-party interim rule.

If you would like detailed information about these critical beacons of change in South Africa, we invite you to subscribe to Negotiations News.

A concerned human rights group in South Africa, Five Freedoms Forum, believing that the dissemination of information is an essential service in the process of democratic transition, has committed itself to the publishing of Negotiations News.

This new service publication will deal exclusively with the negotiations process and will provide its readers with factual, detailed and regular progress reports on the political transition in South Africa. Negotiations News is a 16-page bulletin run and produced by senior South African journalists. Our commitment is to unbiased and accurate reporting.

Negotiations News will record and report on the critical milestones in the process of change — from the present workings of Codesa, the questions being addressed and decisions formulated — to the start of Codesa II late in April, right through interim rule, a constituent assembly, and the establishment of a democratically elected government in South Africa.

Negotiations News will also keep you posted on the economic debate, important policy announcements by all major political players, profiles on the key negotiations and the key question of women's issues in the debate.

Whether you are a politician, business executive, civil servant, academic or a concerned citizen, if you want to be informed about the political process in South Africa, Negotiations News will provide you with the essential information.

Negotiations News will only be available through subscription.

We invite you to subscribe now in time for our first issue in mid-April!

The subscription entitles you to 17 issues of Negotiations News over a 12-month period.
