

UNIVERSITY OF NATAL
GRADUATION / DIPLOMA
CEREMONY

1993

WEDNESDAY 21 APRIL
18:00

DURBAN

THE CHANCELLOR

"Chancellor" is an office that goes back to Antiquity: the original cancellarius regulated access to the Roman Tribune. In medieval times, the office became associated with the heads of the writing departments of early kings. Because so few people were literate, a chancellor was automatically learned. This explains why the heads and spokesmen of the early universities were also accorded the title. More recently, the office has become largely symbolic, and the real executive head of a university is, in fact, its vice-chancellor.

THE MACE

The Chancellor's Mace generally referred to as "the Mace", is used on ceremonial occasions presided over by the chancellor and is regarded as the Chancellor's "staff of office". It symbolises the University's protection of its Chancellor.

The use of the mace as a symbol of authority has a long history. The head of a copper mace, which apparently dates back to the 12th Century before Christ, has been excavated at Beyce Sultan in Asia. In the early centuries, churchmen who went to war often carried a mace in preference to a sword. One side of the mace-head was beautifully decorated with the owner's emblem and on the other side was a large knob which served as a weapon, and was always round so that the church law never to shed blood was always carefully observed! In the early centuries the mace was a symbol of the king's authority.

During the power struggle between the king and the Commons in the 13th Century, the king gave the speaker the mace as a symbol of his indemnity against arrest.

The Mace was designed by Mr G H Atkins, senior lecturer in sculpture in the University's Department of Fine Arts, was made in England and was first used at the 1970 graduation ceremonies.

THE ARMORIAL BEARINGS (See front cover)

The armorial bearings of the University of Natal were awarded by the College of Arms in London.

The two black wildebeest come from the arms of the Province of Natal. They are shown in full course to symbolise movement and progress. The two open books represent the universal heritage of knowledge and the two centres of the University, Durban and Pietermaritzburg. The five-pointed star represents the land of Natal discovered and named on Christmas Day in 1497. Stella Aurorae, star of the dawn, symbolises the role of the University in dispelling the darkness of ignorance and evil.

ACADEMIC DRESS

The wearing of gowns by judges, ministers, teachers and scholars is an ancient and impressive custom. When the graduating students at universities receive their diplomas or degrees, they, too (and perhaps, for some, only this once in their lives), wear the caps and gowns of this long tradition. By wearing the ancient regalia, they hold hands with students past and students present.

In modern times the standard cap and gown are almost universally worn. Of all the components of the costume, the hood conveys the greatest amount of information: it makes clear the level of the degree, the faculty in which it was given, and the institution which awarded it.

HONORIS CAUSA, UPON

REVEL ALBERT ELLIS FOX

Revel Fox was born in Durban and educated at the Durban High School and the University of Cape Town, where he was awarded the Bachelor of Architecture degree in 1948 and a Master of Urban and Regional Planning degree (with distinction) in 1969.

As a practising architect and planner, he has been responsible for almost two hundred major projects, ranging from work in squatter settlements to consultancies on major urban design projects.

He has been the recipient of many honours and awards during the past twenty five years; significant amongst these for the people of Natal, was the illuminated resolution of the Durban

City Council in 1988 recording the city's appreciation for his "outstanding contribution to the Durban Beach and City redevelopment" (which included the pedestrianisation of the city centre leading to the Workshop complex). Of the many awards he has received for services to architecture throughout South Africa, perhaps the greatest honour was the award by the Community of South African Architects of its highest award to a member: The Gold Medal of the Institute of Architects, in 1977.

Revel Fox has combined his professional achievements with scholarship, having authored some seventy-nine publications on architecture, planning, conservation, environment, art and education.

Service to his profession and to society is reflected in the thirty honorary posts he has held, including Chairman of the Institute of South African Architects Board of Education and the Education Advisory Committee of the South African Council for Architects from 1970 to 1975.

The University of Natal pays tribute to Revel Fox for his life-long contribution to excellence in architectural practice, education and the advancement of architecture in South Africa.

HISTORY

From modest beginnings in February 1910, when 57 students were enrolled in the newly established Natal University College in Pietermaritzburg, the University of Natal has grown into a nationally and internationally respected institution. Lectures were originally held in Maritzburg College. The first university building (now referred to as the Old Main Building) was built on land donated by the Pietmaritzburg Corporation and was opened in August 1912.

In Durban, meanwhile, the Natal Technical Institute had been founded in 1907 and by the end of World War I was offering university-level courses in engineering and commerce. These courses were taken over by the Natal University College in 1922, and were ultimately housed in the Howard College building on the Durban campus. The erection of the building was made possible by the generosity of a Durban man, T B Davis, who wished to honour the memory of his son, Howard, who had been killed in the battle of the Somme.

At the outset, the Natal University College had offered the courses of the University of the Cape of Good Hope. In 1918, it became a constituent college of the University of South Africa. But in 1949, because of rapid growth in student numbers, the range of courses offered, and the achievements and opportunities in research, independent university status was granted. The legislation under which the University was established in 1910 imposed no racial restrictions on student admissions. This made it possible, in 1936, to start classes for "non-Europeans", and in 1951 the Medical School, accepting African, Indian and "Coloured" students, was established in Durban's Umbilo Road.

But by now, the Nationalist Government was in power and the architects of apartheid were hard at work. A government ruling that white undergraduate students be barred from the Medical School was the first major inroad by the State into the University's autonomy. Worse was to follow. In 1957, a Bill was introduced in Parliament which provided for the removal of the Medical School from the University's control, and for the exclusion of "non-white" students from the University's other faculties. Academic staff and the Medical School threatened to resign, and the University Council and Senate criticised the State for this assault on university autonomy and academic freedom. The Bill was withdrawn, only to be replaced two years later by the notorious Extension of University Education Act in terms of which ministerial permission was required for a student not classified white to register in any faculty other than the Medical School.

In spite of this harassment, the University of Natal had by 1960 developed into the largest university centre for African, Indian and "Coloured" students in Africa south of the equator. The University also committed itself to a protracted fight to recover the right to admit students on merit, regardless of race.

In 1983, the permit system laid down in the 1959 Extension of University Education Act was replaced by the so-called "quota system", under which the Minister of Education could determine quotas relating to student admissions. The University's protest based on its long standing objection to State interference in its admission policy, was loud and protracted - and successful. No quotas were imposed; and the University has seen rapid growth in the admission - on merit - of African, Indian and "Coloured" students. In its 1989 Mission Statement the University unequivocally committed itself to serve all sections of the community through excellence in scholarship, teaching, learning, research and development.
