Notes

Nature of certificate

1 This certificate relates only to the condition of the testable items at the time of the test. It should not be regarded as evidence of the condition of the items tested at any other time nor should it be taken as evidence of the general mechanical condition of the vehicle.

Need for certificates

2 It is an offence to use on a public road any vehicle which is subject to periodic test that does not have a current test certificate. Therefore a new certificate should be obtained on or before the expiry date of this certificate if the vehicle is to continue in use on roads in Great Britain.

Date of expiry

3 The date of expiry of a test certificate is 12 calendar months from the date of issue. However if you obtain a new certificate not more than one month before this certificate expires the expiry date of the new certificate may be entered as 12 months from the expiry date of the old certificate. To take advantage of this extension of expiry date the old certificate must be shown to the tester at the time the new one is issued. If you do not produce the old certificate the tester must enter the expiry date as 12 months from the date of issue. The new certificate may then only be amended if it is produced with the old one to a District Office of the Department of Transport. The address of the appropriate office can be obtained from the testing station.

Production of test certificates

4 Production of a test certificate may be required by a police officer if the vehicle concerned is subject to periodic test. If you cannot produce your certificate within 5 days you are liable to a fine. A certificate must also be sent or produced with an application for a licence for the vehicle. You are advised therefore to keep this certificate readily available while it is in force.

Loss of certificates

5 If you lose this certificate you can get a duplicate from the testing station which carried out the test provided you can give the serial number or the approximate date of issue. If the testing station is no longer testing, you may get a duplicate from the District Office but you must quote the registration number of your vehicle, the name (or number) of the testing station and the approximate date of issue of the certificate. A charge is made for a duplicate certificate whether it is obtained from the testing station or District Office.

Keep this certificate in a safe place and make a separate note of the particulars in case it is lost.
