July 1, 1991

Dear Colleague:

Enclosed is Working Paper Number 17, called South African Trusts/Foundations. While it is certainly not a complete catalogue of its topic, it is a first attempt at assembling this category of information about potential funding sources in South Africa.

The Introduction of the publication attempts to clarify, from a legal point of view, some of the different kinds of trusts and voluntary associations that make philanthropic contributions under South African law.

Also enclosed are some supplements to Working Paper Number 16, U.S. Support Organizations Raising Money for South African Causes, and one to this new Working Paper Number 17.

We are pleased to be able to accommodate these late or amended entries through our loose-leaf format. In order to keep track of the great volume of information produced by the SAIE, some of our users find it essential to keep the working papers in a loose-leaf binder and to create an index and separators.

Please consult the back cover of this new working paper and let us know if you need additional copies of back issues.

I hope your work is going well.

Sincerely,

Ann McKinstry Micou
Director, South African Information Exchange

Center for Racial Equality and Democratic Opportunity, Inc. (CREDO)

Mission Statement:

CREDO believes that the discussion about the attainment of democracy in South Africa has been too general and has concentrated almost exclusively on immediate political objectives. CREDO wishes to involve the best minds in South Africa and the United States in identifying and looking critically at the impediments to democracy in several important areas, and in then identifying ways in which those impediments can be overcome.

Program Areas:

- Conditions required for the establishment and maintenance of democracy in South Africa;
- Land reform;
- Housing;
- Education.

Board:

While CREDO was organized and incorporated as a 501(c)(3) foundation in 1987, it was relatively inactive until the old Board resigned early in 1990 and was replaced by a Board with more urgent objectives and with deep experience of Africa in general and South Africa in particular:

- Ambassador Alan Wood Lukens (President);
- Honorable Donald J. Bouchard;
- Ambassador C. William Kontos;
- Armistead Lee;
- Ambassador Arthur W. Lewis;
- LaRue R. Lutkins.

The Fund For Education in South Africa (FESA)

Mission Statement:

FESA is a nonprofit fund supporting community-based education and training programs in urban and rural areas in South Africa for out-of-school youths who have been excluded by apartheid from educational opportunities.

Program Areas:

Projects supported by FESA include private and community efforts characterized by a strong determination to shape democratic education practices and a commitment to nonracial values.

FESA will also provide resources to participating universities in South Africa with community outreach programs for education and skills training of such youths.

Trustees:

The Board of Trustees and the South Africa Committee of the Board is currently being set up and will consist of a broad range of Americans and South Africans committed to working towards a nonracial, democratic South Africa. The Committee will reflect the regional and diverse educational interests of community education initiatives, participating universities, civic and student organizations, and trade unions.

Global Fund for Women

Mission Statement:

The Global Fund for Women, established in 1987, is a grantmaking organization that provides funds to seed, strengthen, and link groups that are committed to women's well-being internationally and work for their full participation in society. The Fund also promotes greater donor understanding of the importance of funding women's activities internationally and encourages increased support for women's programs. A vital orientation of the Fund is its commitment to giving flexible, timely support to women's groups working on emerging, controversial, or difficult issues.

Program Areas:

The International Grantmaking Program assists women's groups by providing funds in a flexible, responsive, and timely way. Grants are given to groups whose work coincides with the mission of the Global Fund for Women. The Fund will respond to three particular areas of concern: female human rights; communications, media, and communications technology; and economic autonomy of women. An organisation dedicated to promoting women's full participation in society, the Fund is interested in efforts to promote women's rights in the national liberation struggle in South Africa. Grants have provided for workshops, publications, and campaigns advocating issues such as women's literacy, economic independence, and the eradication of violence against women.

The Philanthropic Education Program assists donors in developing their programs and stimulates increased giving to women's concerns worldwide. The Fundraising Program provides support for the Global Fund for Women and identifies, motivates, and advises donors to the Fund. As a nonendowed foundation, the Fund relies on the annual support of many individuals, foundations, and corporations.

Mandela Freedom Fund (MFF)

Mission Statement:

The Mandela Freedom Fund (MFF) supports humanitarian and educational projects in South Africa and educates the U.S. public on the effects of apartheid and the need for a nonracial, unitary democracy in South Africa.

Program Areas:

MFF funded several of the educational activities associated with the U.S. visit of Nelson Mandela and his ANC colleagues in June 1990, which was coordinated nationally by Democracy for South Africa (DSA is a social welfare [501(c)(4)] organization dedicated to advocacy for social, economic, and political justice in South Africa and the abolition of apartheid).

MFF's Board has approved grants to support South African programs of relief for refugees and returning exiles, leadership training, and education in--and transition to--democracy.

Board of Directors:

- Representative Ronald Dellums, Washington, D.C.;
- Sylvia Hill, Washington, D.C.;
- Assemblywoman Barbara Lee, Sacramento, CA;

The U.S. Fund for Leadership Training in Southern Africa
(formerly The (U.S.) Fund for the Southern Africa Outward Bound School, Inc.)

Mission Statement:

The mission of The U.S. Fund for Leadership Training in Southern Africa is to train young people of all races and backgrounds for leadership in a new South Africa and to promote peaceful change. This is accomplished by supporting the development of Outward Bound's philosophies and programs in southern Africa as evidenced by:

- Inspiring self-respect, care for others, responsibility to the community, and sensitivity to the world environment;
- Demonstrating its belief in the value of compassion through active help for all human beings;
- Achieving greater understanding among all people; and
- Working together on an international basis to remove the barriers which separate the people of the world; and
- Supporting similar educational institutions.

Program Areas:

There are currently three bases in southern Africa. One at Hobbiton on Hogsback in the Eastern Cape region of South Africa; a second at Thaba Phatsoa in Lesotho; and a third in the Chimanimani Mountains of Zimbabwe. A fourth base is under consideration at Magoebaskloof in the Northern Transvaal in South Africa.

World University Service (WUS)

Mission Statement:

WUS's concerns have come to embrace education in its widest sense, with participation. WUS has five priority areas: education and training for refugees, returnees, and victims of discrimination; human rights; women; community development; and academic cooperation.

Background:

WUS is a nonsectarian, nonreligious educational and development service organisation that works in close partnership with World University Service internationally. It has been involved in fundraising and community development in South Africa for more than 30 years, but has only been established internally in South Africa since 1989.

Programme Areas:

The type of programmes supported by WUS include literacy, research, skills development, rural development, educational media, and culture.

Advisory Board:

The work of WUS is overseen by an Advisory Board of 13 persons who come from all parts of South Africa, urban and rural. All are involved and based with various community organisations--religious, educational, youth, women, academic, and political.
