African National Congress

18 Local levels

It's particularly at the grassroots level that the ANC must effect meaningful change. The civic associations which replaced discredited township bodies will play a key role here

21 The detonated school

There are 6,5m black teenagers in SA today. Untold millions have missed years of schooling, or received a hopelessly inadequate education. What does the ANC plan to do about them?

26 The Reds in the bed

Communism became synonymous with liberation to many in the Fifties and Sixties. And the SACP still carries that association for some in the Nineties

Life beyond myth

More is needed than the proven ability to adapt while keeping principles intact. Meeting real needs in an uncomfortably real world is now demanded of the ANC

Group areas

Though there is primary agreement on a just, democratic constitution, areas of difference could mean negotiations more protracted than talks-about-talks would suggest

1 Defining growth

The socialist visions of the ANC are not unlike those of the old-style Nationalists. And both are out of sync with international economic developments

30 On to a peace culture

A neutral security force is integral to the success of all peace initiatives. The challenge that lies ahead is the integration of the security forces of the SA government and Umkhonto we Sizwe

36 'Show me another way'

Deputy President Nelson Mandela — a man who has become the living embodiment of the ANC — talks frankly to the FM

39 Cloth-cutting

Will post-apartheid trade unions in SA find they've lost the key role they played in the liberation struggle?

42 Unlocking the doors

ANC policy indicates that SA could very well be back in the thick of world sport sooner than most people think

44 Against sexism

The ANC Women's League's objectives are to defend and advance the rights of women and so help create a non-sexist SA

47 No easy return

The return and resettlement of thousands of exiles is a major task. It requires both facilities and money, which its executives say the ANC doesn't have
