A document
to be proud of

ISTORY is sometimes lost on those who live it. Those able to be present in Parliament or watch the moving proceedings on their TV screens, however, can claim testimony to the adoption of a founding document many succeeding generations of South Africans will have to abide by and refer to. It is a document that will hopefully serve our nation for centuries to come and, to echo Leon Wessels, may there never be reason again for the Constitutional Assembly to meet.

While our different political parties could not reach full consensus on all its clauses, the new Constitution is nevertheless a document all South
Africans can be proud of.

In terms of its crafting and entrenchment of basic democracy, it is considered the best in the world. From whence we came as a society, it is appropriate that human rights underpin the philosophy of the new Constitution.

The drama that surrounded the final negotiations on the draft is perhaps typical of a society
that seems to have a penchant for living on the edge. It was, however, gratifying to see the National Party, the Democratic Party and the Pan Africanist Congress put aside their reservations
and rise to the occasion. That there was sympathy and understanding for the Freedom Front's decision to abstain speaks loudly for the bonding
value of the constitution-making process since Kempton Park.

But there are many obstacles ahead. Several sections and clauses of the new Constitution will be challenged in the Constitutional Court.

It was ironic, and somewhat disturbing, that the Inkatha Freedom Party was not mentioned in any of the speeches of party leaders. It seemed as if a niggling and vexing problem was simply being wished away.

President Nelson Mandela spoke about fulfilling the mandate given by the majority of South Africans but hinted that the new Constitution does not shut the door on dealing with the fears and aspirations of the smaller parties and minority groups. We must hope and pray that the magnanimity and humanity of Mandela and the accommodating spirit of the ANC will imbue the Constitution in the decades to come.

PRETORIA: Police excavating the house here of paedophile Gert van Rooyen said yesterday they had found a piece of bone about 1,5m under the main bedroom floor.

Pretoria investigation services head Director Reggie Marimuthu said the fragment had been picked up about noon on Tuesday at the exact spot a witness had claimed police might find a body.

It had not been ascertained if the bone was human, but results of forensic tests should be available this morning, he said.

The discovery was one reason why he kept saying police were confident of â\200\234finding somethingâ\200\235 yesterday.

Police would continue the excavations today.

Machinery was used yesterday to remove the concrete topping

from the largest part of the bed- - room floor, leaving the earth exposed for digging.

Forensic experts sifting through theâ\200\231soil had found nothing else of significance, Marimuthu said.

He said two more people had come forward earlier yesterday with information to facilitate the investigation of the disappearance of five teenage girls seven years ago. Marimuthu declined to elaborate. â\200\224 Sapa

MONEY â\200\224 or the lack it â\200\224 is at the heart of the decision to rename Newlands Rugby Stadium to Norwich Park, according to Western Province Rugby
Football Union president Mr
Ronnie Masson and Norwich
Holdings chief executive Mr
Charles Davies.

Although neither the WPRFU or Norwich had announced the move until the Cape Times revealed the name change yesterday, the Norwich
WP Rugby homepage on the Internet has, at least since April 28, referred to the stadium as Norwich Park â\200\224 but then adds:
â\200\234For the Oldies, Newlands.â\200\235

The homepage claims to be
â\200\234the virtual homepage of Norwich Western Province rugby.
The real home of WP is, of course, Norwich Park (Newlands Rugby Stadium) in Cape Town.â\200\235

Norwich, the WP sponsors,
gained naming rights to the 106-year-old home of WP rugby
in a R10-million sponsorship deal late last year.

A joint statement by Masson
and Davies explained that the switch from amateur to professional status had made it a night

impossible a 235 to meet the contractual obligations of players and the financial needs of clubs, schools, referees and development programmes.

a 234 Other avenues had to be explored to generate additional income and not burden the rugby public many of whom cannot afford ticket prices. a 235

According to the statement the stadium will not undergo a complete name change, but Norwich a 231s name will be attached to that of Newlands stadium..

Fans are outraged by the renaming and the Cape Times telephone lines rang continually yesterday as readers phoned in to voice their objections to a

- move they felt was way off-side.

a 234 Bull dust a 235; a 234 it stinks a 235; a 234 it a 231s absurd a 235; a 234 ridiculous a 235 and a 234 appalling a 235, cried rugby devotees.

a 234 Everyone involved in the sell-out of Newlands can go to hell, I call on every Western Province fan, rugby fan and sports fan to boycott Norwich Life, a 235 said Mr Nick Armstrong of Camps Bay, voicing the opinion of many callers.

One caller said acidly that renaming the stadium was not going far enough: a 234 Why don a 231t: they rename the players too, you could have Joel Norwich at a 234 The renaming of the stadium is not motivated by politics

but by money. Not even Louis a 231

Luyt has gone this far: Renaming Ellis Park, Luyt Park,â\200\235 said / :

Mr Mike Rossouw of Sea Point.

Many readers felt that New-lands stadium had a proud place in Cape Townâ\200\231s heritage and enjoyed an international reputa- tion which would be lost with a change in name. Readers com- pared it to renaming Table Mountain or Englandâ\200\231s Twick- enham stadium after a sponsor.

Mr Richard Beer, of Plum- stead, was so incensed after read- ing the Cape Times report while passing through Rivierson- derend on business that he sought out a public telephone to say: â\200\234I will boycott Newlands and hold placards outside the stadium if I have to.â\200\235

â\200\234We ate the new South Africa with a new President and a new Constitution, so why canâ\200\231t we keep New-lands?â\200\235 asked Mr Aubrey Page of Kensington.

Of more than 100 callers yes- terday, only three supported the new name, saying sponsorship was Vital to keep rugby stan- dards up and ticket prices down.

quitting the government was effectively confirmed last night by Deputy President F W de Klerk.

The speculation, which was instrumental in an 11-cent decline in the value of the rand yesterday, put a damper on celebrations for the adoption of the new Constitution, which the NP in fact supported.

De Klerk said many people inside and outside the NP were asking, if the government of national unity was in any case going to be dispensed with: â\200\234Why not now?â\200\235

â\200\234Together with this, people ask whether it would not now be appropriate, at the beginning of a new phase, for the National Party rather to play to the full the role of a dynamic but responsible opposition.â\200\235

NP deputy secretary-general Senator David Malatsi said

Santini that the National Party was cbuhidering

_ there was a 50/50 chance the party would decide at its

Tuesday meeting to leave the government.

After negotiations continued into the early hours of yesterday morning, the Constitution was supported by the ANC, the National Party, the Democratic Party and the PAC, while the African Christian Democratic Partyâ\200\231s two MPs voted against it. The IFP boycott of the Constitutional Assembly and the Freedom Frontâ\200\231s decision to abstain were effectively votes against the Constitution.

Constitutional Assembly chairperson Mr Cyril Ramaphosa sounded a warning to the IFP last night, saying it should respect the new Constitution.

Speaking on the SABC television programme Focus, he said the party, which boycotted negotiations on the Constitution, had excluded itself from a history- ae process. :

â\200\234My heart goes out to them,â\200\235 Ramaph sa said. e

He did not think anyone should seek hallenge the Constitution once it had been certified and become the supreme law of the land. i

However, Ramaphosa said he welcomed. th ntention of other parties, including the Democratic Party, to challenge particular clauses in the Constitutional Court.

This meant that when the judges eventually certified the document â\200\234they and all of us will be ee we poe a good constitutionâ\200\235.

Not everyone welcomed the new Constitute and tie compromises that led to it.

GUGULETU POINTS THE WAY

Health workers win

community support

4 d ILL a nurse, kill a doctorâ\200\235 used to be the chilling slogan that sections of an angry Guguletu community once flung at health workers at the local day hospital, when health resources were few yet demand was great, and crime was rampant.

Now itâ\200\231s â\200\234simunyeâ\200\235 (we are one), thanks to a brave initiative by staff, who roped in the community for a co-operative effort that has delivered a new Guguletu community health care centre, which will be officially opened on Saturday by Western Cape Health MEC Mr Ebrahim Rasool.

It is a prime example of the type of facility that forms the backbone of the government's new approach to the provision of health care, away from tertiary and secondary to the primary level.

â\200\234Tt is so nice to come to work

now, and to be able to move freely in the community,â\200\235 said senior professional nurse Nomvuselelo Msindo, during a Cape Times visit yesterday to the centre; which comprises the old day hospital, now renovated, and additional sections. :

â\200\234Yes, this was once a war zone, but now we are at peace,â\200\235 agreed senior professional nurse Ntombekhaya Bambani.

Explaining the turnabout, they said that previously they could not handle the hundreds of patients who queued outside their doors from the early hours of the morning demanding badly needed treatment. :

Security staff had had to restrict numbers at a certain point in the morning when matters got out of hand, which meant that residents

_who had patiently stood in line for hours had to be turned away.

This had led to a flood of resentment. In addition, gangsters had had a grip on the township that extended to its day hospital, where they demanded preferential treatment. This led to serious clashes between security staff and the criminal elements. Gunfights had been common occurrences.

â\200\234Our trauma section used to be a prefabricated building, and often gangsters shot right through it, putting our lives and the lives of our patients in danger,â\200\235 Msindo said.

â\200\234Gangfights were not restricted to the backstreets, and on occasion extended to the precincts of the hospital. One day someone was shot dead right inside our hospital, but a rumour was spread that we had somehow Killed the man.â\200\235 The result was that the angels of mercy became objects of hate. Nurses and doctors were not free to move around, and had to be escorted to work.

â\200\234That was when the slogan â\200\230kill a nurse, kill a doctorâ\200\231 was born,â\200\235 said Bambani.

SIMUNYE (WE ARE ONE): Senior professional nurse Phyllis Nc

hukana checks on details in the courtyard of the new Guguletu community health care centre in NY3. The facility is the result of a co-operative effort between the community and health care staff, with the backing of the Western Cape health department, headed by MEC Mr Ebrahim Rasool, who is to open it officially on Saturday.

â\200\234It was obviously no way to work, and we started organising.â\200\235

They started by joining the National Educational, Health and Allied Workers Union (Nehawu), and later approached the community. Out of that initiative, a health committee came into being in 1993, and it eventually appealed successfully to Rasool's department for help.

One major problem remains, however. Additional services are now being offered at the much bigger centre, but the number of staff has stayed the same, because of government cutbacks.

Today there are 14 general

assistants, three radiographers, one physiotherapist with two assistants, a nutrition adviser, an orthopaedic sister, a social worker, six family planners, 14 clerks, three pharmacists, nine doctors and 49 nurses.

When there was only the day hospital, staff provided a dedicated service to about 450 patients daily, excluding trauma and emergency cases.

And besides additional services and facilities, the Guguletu community health care centre, unlike its day hospital equivalent, will offer a 24-hour service from next Monday.

Sparks fly as Absa attempts to have commissioner axed

EUNICE RIDER
SUPREME COURT REPORTER

SPARKS FLEW at the Tollgate Inquiry yesterday when Absa Bank brought a special application for the recusal of commissioner Mr Betrand Hoberman, SC, on the basis that he was 'hopelessly biased' against the bank and 'incapable of maintaining the degree of impartiality' required. The morning's proceedings _were marked by heated exchanges

between Hoberman and Mr Tony Rubens, SC, counsel for Absa Bank,
with Hoberman accusing Rubens
of being â\200\234boringâ\200\235 and â\200\234childishâ\200\235.
Counsel for the liquidators, Mr Gavin Woodland, said he had been taken by surprise and did not support the application.

Hoberman dismissed the application â\200\234nothing but a charade for the benefit of the pressâ\200\235.

The application did not appear to be bona fide, he said. If it had been, Absa would have furnished
him with minutes of certain meetings he had asked for a week ago,
instead of telling him that these were in Johannesburg and he could inspect them there.

Hoberman assured Absa that he was not biased against the bank.

Rubens, however, insisted Absa would take its application for Hoberman's recusal to the Supreme Court and needed a postponement of the proceedings to.

launch this application.

Hoberman granted the post-ponement despite a complaint from Woodland on the wasted costs involved.

Absa based yesterday's application for Hoberman's recusal on a claim that Hoberman had offended the fundamental principle of justice with his conduct.

As an example, Rubens said the commissioner had asked at an earlier session: "Who is there to assist me in taking on Absa?"

Rubens argued that it was not Hoberman's role to "take on Absa" and that he had "descended into the arena and lost (the) detachment" required of him in his quasi-judicial role of commissioner.

Absa was also offended by Hoberman's remarks that it had "something to hide" from the commission: "This observation was quite remarkable in the light of the assistance rendered to this commission by Absa, (which) co-operated in making its voluminous and often highly sensitive and confidential records available."

Hoberman was also accused of "an unfair questioning" of chief executive Dr Danie Cronjé.

It was alleged he did this to cause maximum embarrassment and to create adverse publicity for the group.

Absa further alleged that Hoberman's insistence on investigating the "pack of lies" regarding claims about the Reserve Bank's controversial "lifeboat" to the group had created the appearance of his being prejudiced against Absa.

Absa has denied any connection between the lifeboat and the liquidation of the Tollgate Group, or that it forced Tollgate's liquidation in 1992.

It said Hoberman had further indicated â\200\234unfairnessâ\200\235 towards Absa by setting stringent time limits in Absaâ\200\231s case and not in those of any other witnesses.

Rubens referred to an interview Hoberman had granted to Millennium magazine and said it was obvious from the article that he had become hopelessly biased to the degree where he openly consorted with a publication â\200\234totally hostile to Absaâ\200\235.

Mr Hennie Diedericks, former managing director of Tollgate, Trust Bank and Volkskas, was scheduled to be cross-examined on his claim at a previous session that Absa had deliberately sought Tollgateâ\200\231s liquidation as the group was in financial trouble.

CAROL CAMPBELL

THE NIGHT Ms Heidi Dennis â\200\224 a temporary teacher working in Mitchells Plain â\200\224 met President Nelson Mandela, she asked him how she could get funds to buy paint to renovate her school.

Never in her wildest dreams did she expect the President to do anything about her small request â\200\224 made at a dinner party for local youth leaders at his Cape Town home Genadendal.

Today, Mandela will visit Beacon Hill Secondary School to celebrate the end of renovations which were set in motion when he asked the managing director of Woolworths, Mr Syd Muller, to fund the development as part of his Presidential Lead project.

Also on his itinerary today is a visit to Bongolethu Primary School in Philippi â\200\224 another school renovated at Woolworthsâ\200\231 expense.

â\200\234T never expected him to do anything after our conversation that night, but two days later someone from his office phoned to say he wanted to see my principal Mr Archie Lewis and me at Tuyn-

huis in 20 minutes and that a car
was on the way to pick us up.â\200\235

Lewis thought the call was a practical joke until one of the Presi-dentâ\200\231s bodyguards arrived to take the two teachers into Cape Town.

Muller was waiting with Mandela at Tuynhuis when they arrived
and before long Woolworthsâ\200\231
involvement in the revamping of Beacon Hill was finalised. .

All broken windows were replaced, burglar guards were put up, the staff room and several administration offices were carpeted,
the pupilsâ\200\231 toilets and showers
were fixed, eight computers and a
fax machine were donated and 200
athletics uniforms were made for schools

the pupils. As part of the renovation deal pupils agreed they would replace any windows broken in their classrooms.

â\200\234After the uniforms arrived the school spirit soared and we won
the inter-school athletics two days
later â\200\224 our sports master was convinced it was because the pupils
were so proud of their school.â\200\235

Woolworths Reconstruction
Co-ordinator Ms Nolitha Fakude
said at least four more schools in other provinces would benefit from the companyâ\200\231s 1996/1997

Surprise IP witness
tells of youth's killing

DURBAN: A senior IFP member appeared before the TRC yesterday on the same day that his organisation slated the probe in a newspaper article. Staff Writer ROGER FRIEDMAN reports.

POLITICAL WRITER

THE wife of Foreign Affairs official Mr Robert McBride has lashed out at individuals, and sections of the media, for attempting to portray her husband as â\200\234SAâ\200\231s very own devilâ\200\235.

Mrs Paula McBride said she found it:ironic â\200\224 when seen against the â\200\234grotesque backgroundâ\200\235 of killings in KwaZulu-Natal â\200\224 that the Truth Commission should once more be focusing on her husband and the Magooâ\200\231s Bar bombing.

A controversial provision contained in the record of understanding signed in 1992 by the NP and the ANC, paved the way for the release of her husband and other prisoners.

Ms Cher Gerrard and Mrs Sharon Welgemoed, whose sister Ms Marchelle Gerrard was one of three young women killed in the

eventually helped home.

But two nights later a mob surrounded his house, and started throwing petrol bombs through the windows. Being an inyanga (healer) saved him, Miya said. â\200\234There were lots of-bottles inside the house and bottles all over. But although they were burning outside, as soon as they came in the house they were extinguished. As an inyanga my house was protected. The petrol bombs were weaker than my muti.â\200\235

His attackers disappeared into the darkness. Later they returned when he was out and burned the place down. He asked if the commission could help him to rebuild it.

FULLER picture of the KwaZu-

lu-Natal conflict started

unfolding here yesterday when
a senior IFP member testified before the Truth and Reconciliation Commission as a surprise witness.

A â\200\234thrilledâ\200\235 commission chairman, Archbishop Desmond Tutu,
said at the conclusion of the days proceedings: â\200\234It seemed as if all along we were labouring under a very serious misconception. Some of the public pronouncements of some of their

waged not only against whites who imposed apartheid, but also against blacks who chose a different way of opposing it.â\200\235

Miya told of events which occurred outside Durban on September 17, 1989, including the killing of a youth seeking his protection by ANC-leaning United Democratic Front comrades, his own near-fatal
stabbing, and the razing of his house.

After pleading with two men
called Cele and Mthembu to spare

1986 Durban blast, demanded

leaders had given the impression that the commission was not exactly their blue-eyed boy.â\200\235

The appearance of former IFP
councillor and branch chairman Mr Silulani Miya came on the same day
as IFP Senator Ruth Rabinowitz and advocate Mr Kieren Oâ\200\231Malley of the organisationâ\200\231s research unit rubbished the commission in an article
in an afternoon newspaper here.

They wrote: â\200\234Justice and the integrity of the legal process and the law will be sacrificed not, as we are told, for nation-building and recon-

Arrests after hold-up

POLICE arrested three suspected robbers found in possession of thousands of rands in jewellery and cash, shortly after a dramatic hold-up at an upmarket Constantia hotel yesterday.

A German tourist was slightly injured after being pistol-whipped by the gang during the robbery at the Cellars-Hohenort hotel around 2am, police said. 200 Crime Writer

McBride said yesterday that, as much as I would have liked to have commented, doing so would contravene his conditions of employment at the Department of Foreign Affairs.

However, his wife has responded by saying that his position as a Foreign Affairs deputy-director, which he got after undergoing a selection process, had nothing to do with his activities as a former member of uMkhonto weSizwe (MK).

She said that despite what many people would like to think, Robert did not wake up one morning and decide that it looked like a good day for a

Stompie was 14 when he died after being assaulted by members of the Mandela United Football Club in Soweto. He had gone to Soweto to escape constant harassment by security forces in Parys.

Before she could bury him, Seipei said, reporters had arrived at her Parys home and informed her that Mrs Winnie Madikizela-Mandela had told them Stompie was in Botswana.

Ms A Van Vuuren, Plumstead: Referring to Monday's article on affirmative action in the police force: why is the Cape Times allocating to itself the task of harassing police officers and why is the paper showing clear signs of anti-white bias? Surely police morale is suffering when the community should be supporting them. The Cape Times is being neither supportive nor objective.

Mr Louis Jonkers, Bellville: WP should not have an excuse for not winning their match against Northern Transvaal on Friday if they play with the same determination they showed in their last two games. All the best to Joel and the boys.

Mr D Wood, Mitchells Plain: Referring to Minister Asmal's comment that the Gravy train is an utter myth: I fully agree with the minister that there is no gravy train. But there is definitely a gravy express which is going so fast that the minister cannot see it.

Mr William Buhm, Milnerton: When are we going to stop blaming the bankers of Wall Street for the falling rand? The real source of the problem is our so-called friends: Cuba, Gaddafi, Hamas, IRA and PLO. Being associated with them will not do us any good.

Mr E Majiet, Wetton: There is not a day that goes by without me cursing this government for ignoring Quranic and biblical laws. We don't even hear from our Christian brothers and sisters in Parliament. There has been no condemnation from the Muslim Judicial Council. It seems their only concern is the right to life and to hell with the victims. f

Mr J Waterhouse, Kenilworth: Where have all the traffic police gone to? The motorists are getting away with murder.

Mr J H Kolbie, Grassy Park: After 25-years in the SA Navy I find it difficult to believe the treatment I received after being loyal to the service for so long. Other officers who came years after me and who I taught received better treatment from the navy after being retrenched.

Mr S Adams, Rylands Estate: Dion stores promise to beat anyone's price, but that is not so as I discovered when J went to purchase a washing machine from their store. After much consultation with the salesman I finally decided to buy it elsewhere and got it much cheaper.

how that the average murder rate per 100 000 people in death penalty states is almost double that of non-death penalty states.

Moreover, there is no significant distinction in the pattern of murder rates between death penalty and non-death penalty states over the four years in question compared to 1991.

There has been a reduction in 1994 murder rates in nine of the 13 non-death penalty states against an increase in murder rates in 14 and a decrease in 22 of the death penalty states.

Briefly, as far as the rest of Hoffman's letter is concerned, life imprisonment for serial killers prevents serial killings. What seems to have escaped Hoffman is that serial killers are not serial killers until they are arrested. Many

Israel's raids more barbaric than hanging

Mee ELLMAN (Letters, April 22) states
he is a progressive Jew and is shocked by Rabbi David Hoffman's views on capital punishment.

He considers capital punishment barbaric
and quotes the Jewish law: "Thou shall not _ kill."

What I find barbaric is the recent action
against a handful of religious fanatics opposed to Israel during which more than 100 innocent people died and hundreds of thousands were made homeless.

If Israel thinks that murderers have the right
to life then surely those extremists who attacked her also have the same rights? Why should Israel try to exterminate them with disregard for the innocents who also suffer? Perhaps Ellman can quote another Jewish law to justify this?

I am in favour of capital punishment and am certain that it is effective in countries such as Malaysia, Singapore and Arab states where it is carried out.

It is useless saying it doesn't work in the US.
Of course it doesn't when less than one in 1 000

- murderers is likely to be executed.

I find it incomprehensible that countries
can support "right to life" for murderers yet
maintain, at great cost, huge defence forces that are trained to have no respect for human life. If we believe in life for all, why do we need a defence force?

As the police cannot cope, it is time that we used the SA Defence Force for an all-out war against criminals to show that crime doesn't pay. Bring back capital punishment and let us
see if it doesn't work.

ICHAEL ELLMAN (Letters, April 22) is partially right. The moral, or rather, "moralistic"
consensus among Jews who consider themselves liberal and progressive is overwhelmingly against capital punishment.

But the essence of liberalism, as John Stuart
Mill made clear in his classic On Liberty, is freedom of thought, speech and opinion.

No opinion can be considered truly enlightened and liberal, let alone valid, unless it dares to be held up to scrutiny. And there can be no
advance in human ethics and jurisprudence

DECEASED: Eddie Perlmutter, an American who was murdered while hiking in South Africa.

without the dialectic whose application to ever
new and unique situations must be constant.

When Joe and Ellie Perlmutter, reform Jews
from Santa Cruz, California, came to SA for the trial of their son Eddie's murderer, a serial killer
on a rampage, my abolitionist views began to change because of love and compassion.

Ellman, a liberal Jew from London, might find my new views barbaric and shocking. For the Perlmutter, the reform Jewish family of a victim of a South African serial killer who was sentenced to death, my advocacy is not barbaric
and shocking, but compassionate and loving.

The Torah is explicit in its granting permission for the death penalty. Genesis 9:6 states:

Whoever shed the blood of man,

By man shall his blood be shed;

For in His image

Did God-make man.

The true and direct translation of the sixth
commandment "Lo Tirtzach" is "Thou shalt:
not murder", not "Thou Shalt not kill" which would be Lo Taharog.

Still, many, if not most, rabbis are abolition-
ists and have been so for thousands of years!
Rabbi Shimon Ben Gamliel admonished his abolitionist colleagues by noting how their aboli-

tionist stance would increase the spilling of inno- _ cent blood in yeoriety.

The only legitimate argument for the death
penalty is that significantly less innocent blood
would be spilled in a society thanks to its judicious implementation.

I have delineated just how the death penalty
for serial killers will do precisely that in SA today
and nobody has yet refuted that argument.

All the counter-arguments about inconsistencies and inequities in juridicial application, that
the rich can buy justice and that the justice system is arbitrary and ineffective, applies equally to all other sentences.

â\200\231 Shall we thus dispense with our entire ants system?

More importantly, where that argument cannot apply is precisely to the cases of serial killers whose repeat murders are documented by incontrovertible eye-witness or video records.

SAâ\200\231s current situation with regard to criminal violence is unique. I am not advocating the death penalty for proven serial killers for all places and all times, rather for SA right now as a part of a comprehensive programme to reduce crime.

Epidemics sometimes require extreme measures.

The chief killers, scientifically proven to kill half of all those who become addicted, are cigarettes. As they also lead teenagers on to hard drugs, they are serial killers.

As they exacerbate Aids, TB, cancer, heart attacks and just about every dread disease, teenagers who smoke can expect to die from their 20s onwards.

Those fighting child abuse, hard drugs, alcoholism and child pornography should note the hard fact that cigarettes will eventually kill more children and teenagers than all the rest combined.

The overwhelming need is to target the No 1 killers - cigarettes.

Mavericks could

THE ANC faces a serious election crisis in the Western Cape as disgruntled members who have since been suspended
go up against official party candidates.

The problem, which occurs in all six Metropolitan sub-structures, is worst in Tygerberg, and the ANC fears political infighting could split the vote in certain wards, to the National Party's advantage.

We are very concerned about this, but nevertheless
still confident that the official ANC candidates will win

their ward battles,â\200\235 said ANC Western Cape spokesperson Mr Brent Simons.

In 27 of the 160 wards being contested by the ANC its official candidates are being opposed by other ANC members. There are fears that members of the same party standing against each other could confuse voters.

Simons said the organisation had suspended about 30 party members for violating an election code of conduct in terms of which they had agreed to honour the decision of the special ward conference a month ago that decided on the final list of candidates.

Dissatisfaction with the ANCâ\200\231s final choice of candidates is said to be the reason why certain civic associations and individual members have decided to oppose their own arty.

spokesman Dr J C H Landman
said. - :

The clause which the NP had agreed on allowed the state only to consider single medium schools and had taken away the rights of Afrikaners to self-determination in education, he said.

Last night President Nelson Mandela said the Constitution reconciled aspirations for majority rule with the rights of individuals and communities.

The Constitution was not about only the balance of majority rule with the rights of minorities, but also about balances between national and provincial government, between provincial governments and local authorities and between the protection

~ of employees and the protection of employers.

Referring to minority group

concerns about certain provisions in the Constitution, he again emphasised the adoption of the Constitution was â\200\234not the end of the negotiation processâ\200\235.

â\200\234We will continue talking to any concerned group to ensure that any fears that they might have are addressed,â\200\235 he said.

One of these was the Presidentâ\200\231s power to decide on a national anthem â\200\234if and when it becomes necessaryâ\200\235.

â\200\234If any change is envisaged... I want to give the firm assurance that this will be done in full consultation with all parties, taking into account... minority feelingsâ\200\235.

Mandela also paid tribute to Ramaphosa and his deputy Mr Leon Wessels: â\200\234With their negotiating skills, sensitivity and single-minded purpose... they guided the Constitution through this difficult process.â\200\235

â\200\234Comrade Leon, it was an excellent performance,â\200\235 he said in Afrikaans.

Introducing Mandela to dinner guests, Ramaphosa said: â\200\234This is a night to celebrate. It is a night to drink. Wine must flow. It is a night to smile, especially the constitutional smile.â\200\235

Referring to his wearing of a red rose, Ramaphosa said it was to mark the agreement.

He had worn a red and a pink rose to a Constitutional Committee meeting last week when â\200\234it seemed like we were not going to reach agreementâ\200\235.

â\200\234I concluded that I was trying to brighten my mood because we were getting into a situation where I thought we would not reach agreement."

South Africa had a â\200\234revolutionary constitutionâ\200\235, he said.

@ The ANC expressed strong disapproval that the only premier not present at the adoption ceremony was Western Cape NP Premier Hernus Kriel.

Ensuring elections
are free and fair

establish a statutory Independent Electoral Commission to prepare for and oversee elections in South Africa is to be welcomed.

The commission will be empowered to manage any election, ensure elections are free and fair and compile and manage voters rolls. It will also maintain a register of political parties, continually review electoral legislation and promote voter education. It will consist of five people â\200\224 one a Supreme Court judge â\200\224 and will be appointed by a panel which includes the President of the Constitutional Court, the director-general of Finance and two people appointed by the President. An electoral court is also to be established to review all the decisions taken by the commission on electoral matters.

Seen in the light of the abysmal shortcomings of the ad hoc IEC appointed to oversee the April 1994 elections, the apparent thoroughness which has gone into the make-up of this â\200\234newâ\200\235 IEC is to be commended. Free and fair elections lie at the heart of democracy and an independent body, particularly in a country where emotions run as high as they do in South Africa, is essential for the maintenance and guaranteed future of our democratic government.

To be really effective however, the commission needs to be given all the necessary resources and financial support from government that it requires to fulfil its mandate â\200\224 including funds for voter education. It also needs to be able to begin its work as soon as possible if we are to avoid a repeat of the embarrassing bumbling of the past when we, as a nation, go back to the polls in 1999.

â\200\230SA has undergone a rebirthâ\200\231

IN AN HISTORIC address to the Constitutional Assembly to mark the adoption of the new Constitution, PRESIDENT MANDELA issued a solemn pledge that South Africaâ\200\231s laws would never again be able to divide and suppress its citizens.

VER again would the law of South Africa rend people apart or

legalise their oppression and repression, President Nelson Mandela pledged yesterday morning after the country's first democratic constitution was adopted.

South Africa's new constitution was our national soul, our compact with one another
as citizens, underpinned by our highest aspirations and our deepest apprehensions,
he said.

The brief seconds when the majority of parliamentarians approved the country's
new basic law had in a fleeting moment captured the centuries of history endured by South Africans in search of a better future.

As one, you the representatives of the overwhelming majority of South Africans,
have given voice to the yearning of millions, the President said.

South Africa had now undergone a rebirth, cleansed of a horrible past, matured
from a tentative beginning and reaching out to the future with confidence.

Referring to the deadlock on the lockout,
education and property clauses, the President said the nation had teetered on a knife edge.

But this was to be expected given the difficult issues and the tight negotiating deadlines.

But aren't South Africans a wonderful people to whom the words deadlock and
miracle have come to nestle in comfortable
proximity and alternately to grip the nation-

~ al imagination like the plague!

We dare not in the midst of the excitement of last-minute solutions forget the magnitude of the achievement we celebrate today. For beyond these issues lies a fundamental sea-change in South Africa's body

politic that this historic moment symbolises.â\200\235

The constitutionâ\200\231s adoption signalled an historic step beyond the transitional arrangements which legally obliged the nationâ\200\231s representatives to work together

across the racial and political divide, the President said.

â\200\234Now it is universally acknowledged that unity and reconciliation are written in the hearts of millions of South Africans.

â\200\234They are an indelible principle of our founding pledge. They are the glowing fire of our New Patriotism. They shall remain the condition for reconstruction and development, in as much as reconstruction and development will depend on unity and reconciliation.â\200\235

The new constitution obliged government to strive to improve the quality of life of South Africans.

â\200\234Tn this sense, our national consensus recognises that there is nothing else that can justify the existence of government but to redress the centuries of unspeakable privations, by striving to eliminate poverty, illiteracy, homelessness and disease.â\200\235

It also obliged government to promote the development of independent civil society structures.

â\200\234While in the past diversity was seen by the powers-that-be as a basis for division and domination, while in earlier negotiations reference to such diversity was looked at with suspicion, today we affirm in no uncertain terms that we are mature enough to derive strength, trust and unity from the tapestry of language, religious and cultural attributes that make up our nation.

With confidence we are asserting that the individual rights and national self-determination of the South African people shall not be inhibited but reinforced by the collective rights of communities, the President said. |

The Commission for the Promotion and Protection of the Rights of Cultural, Religious and Linguistic Communities was an innovative way of addressing an issue which, when swept under the carpet, came back in ugly forms to haunt the architects of artificial unity.

We are extremely proud that the new constitution asserts equality among South Africa's languages, and, that for the first time the languages particularly of the Khoi, Nama and San communities will receive the attention they deserve after years of being trampled upon in the most humiliating and degrading manner.

Many new provisions on gender issues reflected the progress made towards securing equality for women who had suffered too many deprivations because of their gender. Neither had South Africans shied away from acknowledging that the country was a democracy with many other realities bequeathed by history such as the role of traditional leaders.

By adopting the constitution, tribute was being paid to South Africans like John Mafukuzela Dube, Olive Schreiner, Reverend Calata, Dr Naicker, Dr Abduraman and others who, long ago, called for equality and democracy.

You were acknowledging the suffering of the many witnesses who are appearing before the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and many more citizens, dehumanised, maimed and deprived, but unbowed and unshaken in their confidence in our young democracy.

You were recognising the indelible role of pioneers of the negotiations process such as Oliver Tambo and visionaries within the apartheid establishment who were able to sense the momentum of history.

Indeed, you were paying homage to Chris Hani, Johan Heyns and other martyrs whose love for their country and belief in change inspired more than their immediate supporters. Sapa

Deputy President Thabo Mbeki

- started the trend. 'I am an African,' he informed the Constitutional Assembly. No one doubted him for a moment.

The education clause also differs but it actually confers more rights in respect of 'single medium' schools than did the interim constitution. Finally, the introduction of socio-economic rights and the application of the principle of 'horizontal' (the enforcement of rights between individuals and juristic persons, not just the State and individuals) are significant departures.

The second broad area of difference involves the executive, namely the president and the Cabinet. Here the differences are fundamental, the most obvious of them being a departure from the principle of power-sharing which gave South Africa its government of national unity. 'A

The new constitution unashamedly introduces the principle of majority rule, in that the

cially orientated than at any previous period in its evolution that the Western Province Rugby Union's greatest marketing weapon should be under threat.

Newlands, as it is known to the world's rugby fraternity, has put South African rugby on the map as nothing else has ever done. In the shadow of the mountain, it has an environment that no other ground can ever match, it has a tradition that goes back beyond the turn of the century, and it has an atmosphere that probably only Twickenham can match.

Spectators, whether they sit in the stands or stand on the ramps, are closer to the game than any comparable stadium. And one can still hear the famous roar of the crowd the so-called Newlands ghost long after the final whistle has gone.

One has, of course, to understand the attitude of the

which is ironic at a time when rugby has become more finan-

reverse. At the same time, they had to be careful not to substantially reduce provincial powers at the expense of the centre.

The compromise devised is that of co-operative governance in terms of which all three tiers of government are bound to co-operate with each other. The ANC also attempted to broaden the scope of the overrides in terms of which central government is entitled to overrule provincial government decisions. Partly to lessen this blow, the ANC at a late stage in the negotiations introduced exclusive powers for the provinces in several functional areas of government. At the same time the parties agreed to remove policing powers from the ambit of the provinces.

SOUTH AFRICA'S new constitution marks a fundamental break from the interim constitution negotiated at the Kempton Park talks in 1993.

The differences fall into three different categories. They are, broadly, the chapter on the Bill of Rights, the chapter on the national executive and the chapter on provincial government.

While the new Bill of Rights contains much that is contained in the Kempton Park Bill of Rights, there are significant innovations.

Those which have attracted the most attention are the clauses on labour relations, the property clause and the education clause.

Where the interim constitution conferred sponsors who are entitled to some return for the vast amount of money they invest. They have been generous supporters of Western Province rugby and, without them, the men in the blue and white jerseys would simply not be in a position to compete with the best.

The same applies to the paying public who would find tickets priced largely out of the ordinary person's reach if the operating costs had to come out of their pockets.

Nevertheless, Newlands is and always will be Newlands, not least of all to this newspaper. Sponsors do come and go (you only have to look at the different names that have been attached to the Currie Cup over the last few years, for example) but Newlands and the Western Province Rugby

on employers a right to lock-out striking workers from production plants, this right has been | considerably watered down under pressure from Cosatu. As a sop to the NP and DP which worked closely with big business to salvage a semblance of the right, a new clause has been inserted which refers to existing labour legislation which in itself makes provision for lock-outs. The law may not be changed unless labour and business are consulted.

The property clause is also new and weighs much more heavily towards empowering the State to undertake land redistribution and land reform. Whereas the interim constitution provided a strong positive right to property, the majority party makes up the executive. The majority party is also able to co-opt other parties into the executive on a voluntary basis but there is no longer any constitutional injunction to include the minority parties.

___ Also out is the idea of having two executive deputy presidents. Instead, the president is given powers to select a deputy president from among the members of the National Assembly.

The third area of difference relates to provincial government and the role of the Senate as the central legislative representative of the

Another change affecting provincial powers is the dissolution of the 90-member Senate. In its place is a National Council of Provinces consisting of 10 delegates from each province.

There are also changes other aspects, including the replacement of attorneys-general by directors of public prosecutions, of the Reserve Bank by a central bank and so forth.

Where the negotiated interim constitution reflected, in the main, the concerns of the outgoing government party, the NP, the final constitution reflects in the main the concerns of the provinces. majority ANC.

DOUGLAS HAMILTON

A BURST of sheer pride filled South Africaâ\200\231s
parliament yesterday as it gave birth to the countryâ\200\231s first truly democratic constitution.

In a weird blend of grey-suited restraint
and irrepressible African gaiety, the whole house stood to applaud when the bill was passed by 421 votes to two, and in an instant the chamber was rocking to joyful
black singing.

The good-humoured appeal from the podium for â\200\234Order! We are engaged in the process of making history!â\200\235 only prompted
more gusts of laughter.

South Africaâ\200\231s politicians were almost giddy with relief that the long constitutional process, which culminated in nail-biting
last-minute negotiations, was finally over,
with a grudging consensus achieved at the very last gasp.

â\200\234The nation teetered on a knife edge,â\200\235
said President Nelson Mandela, recalling

deadlock that kept South Africa guessing until late on Tuesday.

Now, in a fleeting moment as electronic votes were totalled, South Africa was undergoing a rebirth, cleansed of a horrible past and reaching to the future with confidence.

The packed benches of Mandela's majority African National Congress were lit up by brilliant African cloth of chrome yellow and emerald green, studded here and there with traditional head-dresses and starched white Muslim caps.

It was the ANC's long struggle which toppled the apartheid system of white minority rule, and it was clearly their day.

Mandela wore a suave, three-piece pinstripe for the occasion, in charcoal grey. A few yards away on the back benches, his ex-wife Winnie sported a Michael Jackson confection of scarlet, black and big gold buttons: Telecommunications minister Jay Naidoo, sporting a silky black goatee and Asian shirt, gazed on with eyes shining.

But from the cooler ranks of the white-led parties, looking self-contained in suits and blazers, came an air of reserved indulgence, betraying their heartfelt misgivings over the constitution they only reluctantly agreed to.

The National Party, South Africa's former rulers, uttered murmurs of dissent when Mandela said too many whites ignored the existence of millions of blacks.

A moment later they had to applaud the nation's premier statesman when, with characteristic fairness, he said blacks made the same mistake, thinking transition was the result of a victory which left whites pegging for mercy.

— FW de Klerk, the reformist who won the Nobel Peace Prize with Mandela for putting apartheid out of its misery, smilingly played his full part in the Rainbow Nation's big day.

But members of his National Party said it could be the last hurrah for the government of national unity that has ruled through two years of transition since 1994â\200\231s all-race elections.

The â\200\234Natsâ\200\235, they hinted, may have already made up their minds that it is time for them to bow out of the coalition, so that they can sharpen their profile as a full-blooded opposition to the ANC ahead of the next general election in April, 1999.

Ominously empty on Constitution Day was the brown leather wedge of seats usually occupied by the Zulu peopleâ\200\231s Inkatha Freedom Party, which boycotted the entire process. P

Violence between Inkatha and Mandelaâ\200\231s ANC has prevented local government elections in the Zulu heartland province.

On Wednesday it was the ghost at the feast of South Africaâ\200\231s hopeful new democracy.

He then made a very poetic speech, about freezing in the frosts, warming in the midday sun, and wondering if

citizenship should even be given to the animals including the mamba â\200\234and the pestilential mosquitoâ\200\235.

But throughout he kept reminding everybody he was an African.

Not to be outdone, Deputy President F W de Klerk declared, to enthusiastic applause: â\200\234I am also an African.â\200\235

Members were less sure about their feelings when he added he had become an African â\200\234through the blood of my forebears which drenched our soilâ\200\235. Against whom had they shed it?

Freedom Front leader Constand Viljoen was another self-proclaimed African.

â\200\234I have to be fashionable,â\200\235 he explained. â\200\234Everybody claims to be an African. Of course I am an African.â\200\235

But he turned out to be the first African speaker not prepared to vote for the new constitution, though he found it â\200\234impossibleâ\200\235 to vote against it, too. It was a case of neither having your cake nor eating it.

Next was DP leader Tony Leon. â\200\234I,

too, am an African,â\200\235 he announced.
Like those other well-known Africans
De Klerk and Viljoen, he also had misgivings about some aspects of the constitution such as the power given to trade unions over employers.

â\200\234It could be said that this Cosatu...â\200\235
he began, before correcting himself,
â\200\234this constitution...â\200\235

It brought a howl of laughter.

â\200\234A Freudian slip,â\200\235 conceded Leon.

PAC president Clarence Makwetu
decided it wasnâ\200\231t necessary to add himself to the growing list of newborn Africans.

â\200\234T have refrained from defining myself,â\200\235 he declared. â\200\234Seeing that each and every speaker before me has accepted the PACâ\200\231s definition, it brings me to the next question: Is it wise to continue calling ourselves a rainbow

nation when everyone of us is an African?â\200\235

Makwetu was given such a rousing
reception that he stopped in his tracks.
Constitutional Assembly deputy chairman Leon Wessels encouraged him
with the words: â\200\234From one African to another, you may proceed.â\200\235

One of Makwetuâ\200\231s quibbles with the constitution was that it â\200\234perpetuates a lie by declaring South Africa
belongs to all who live in it. We say it belongs to Africans.â\200\235

Not one in the chamber-full of Africans disagreed.

ACDP leader the Reverend Kenneth Meshoe was the first speaker since Mbeki not to proclaim his African-ness.

â\200\234Praise the Lord!â\200\235 called out ANC members, before Meshoe had opened his mouth.

He confessed that constitution-
making had made life hectic for his tiny party, adding: â\200\234We have been very thinly spread.â\200\235

â\200\234Both of you,â\200\235 agreed Jannie Momborg (ANC).

The electronic voting system
played up, unable to decide how many

Freedom Front abstentions there had been. So the bells had to be rung a second time to call members to vote again. It became so confusing that Wessels asked everyone to press their red buttons for a "yes" vote when he meant their blue buttons. Thus is history made.

Afterwards President Mandela addressed himself to "distinguished guests ... and Africans", and Wessels boasted that "in South Africa there is no such thing as African time".

Speaking as an African, why not?

CANDIDATES TAKEN OFF AIR

Rabin's last speech in election commercial

JERUSALEM: A ban on interviewing election candidates on Israeli radio and television during a 21-day election period
is forcing them to rely on commercial spots to put their messages across to the electorate.

debut campaign commercial yesterday the real star was the late Mr Yitzhak Rabin.

The radio spot featured excerpts from Rabin's last speech at a November 4 peace rally, delivered
minutes before he was assassinated
by a right-wing Israeli opposed to Middle-East peacemaking.

In the commercial, Rabin's voice
is followed by an announcer who tells voters that "in another 21 days,
you will have to decide whether to stop the peace process ... or move ahead with Peres."

Such commercials are the only way the candidates Peres and his right-wing challenger Mr Benjamin Netanyahu can reach voters from now until the May 29 election.

The reason is a 1950s law that bars contenders from being interviewed or shown on TV and radio

LE Prime Minister Shimon Peres's

during the official campaign period.

Conceived in an era before television, the ban initially applied to newsreels shown in cinemas and
was meant to give opposition candidates a fair chance to get their message across.

Many believe the ban is anachronistic in today's Israel, where nearly everyone has access to cable television and can watch interviews with

Peres and Netanyahu on CNN and BBC television.

Attempts are made before every election to lift the ban, but they are shot down by the opposition, which wants to limit the incumbent â\200\224 in this case Peres â\200\224 from making the most of his office.

Yesterday morning the 21 parties competing in the elections began broadcasting radio spots, followed yesterday evening by TV commer-

seats the party has in parliament.

Seeking re-election

Abiolaâ\200\231s wife

ber of minutes keyed to how many

The commercials are aimed at the undecided, estimated to number eligible voters.

Recent surveys show that Peres has a four percent lead over - Netanyahu, which could lead to a tie if the four percentage points margin of error is taken into account.

One of Netanyahuâ\200\231s soft spots is his lack of experience in public office. Peres, on the other hand, has been prime minister twice, foreign minister and defence minister.

In compensation, Netanyahu yesterday emphasised his relative youth â\200\224 at 46, he is 27 years younger than his rival â\200\224 and reminded listeners that he served five years in an elite army unit.

The ban on interviewing candidates â\200\224 not only Peres and Netanyahu, but all those running for parliament â\200\224 has left Israelâ\200\231s radio stations in a lurch, since talk shows featuring politicians usually make up much of the programming. â\200\224 Sapa-AP

LAGOS: The outspoken wife of Nigeriaâ\200\231s detained presidential claimant Mr Moshood Abiola was freed on bail yesterday after police detained her overnight.

â\200\234Tam very happy itâ\200\231s over for now, there is nothing in the charges, nothing,â\200\235 a tired-looking Mrs Kudirat /biola told reporters.

Police said they arrested Abiola on Tuesday and charged her and two printers with conspiracy and printing false publications.

The charge could carry a one-year prison sentence. They have all pleaded not guilty.

She leapt to prominence as a campaigner for her husbandâ\200\231s release and as a critic of military tuler General Sani Abacha.

Nigeria was plunged into crisis in 1993, when a previous military government annulled a presidential poll which Moshood Abiola is thought to have won. Abiola was charged with treason when he declared himself president.

Heavy fighting despite Ghana talks

MONROVIA: Heavy fighting broke out here yesterday as West African leaders began talks in neighbouring Ghana to salvage a peace accord and reconcile the divided government.

After a day of relative peace on Tuesday, fighters from rival factions battled one another with heavy machine-gun fire, small arms and rocket-propelled grenades on the edge of the Mamba Point diplomatic district.

Fighting was also reported on the strategic Johnson Street Bridge that leads into central Monrovia and in other pockets of the embattled capital.

Palestiniansâ\200\231 telephone line cut

JERUSALEM: Because of an unpaid bill, people in the autonomous Palestinian areas can no longer make calls overseas.

The Israeli telephone company Betsek was refusing to connect international calls from the autonomous areas because the Palestinian authorities had not kept up to date with payments.

Betsek said it was owed 30 million shekels (about R44,4m) to be for connecting Palestinian calls.

Spanish king makes peace call

MADRID: King Juan Carlos called yesterday for a spirit of peace and dialogue as he opened Spainâ\200\231s first parliament with a conservative government since the death of Franco 21 years ago.

In a speech at the inaugural session, he asked parliamentarians to unite in the fight against drugs, Basque separatist violence and social problems.

Brussels tense for Euro Cup final

BRUSSELS: Police detained 150 French and Austrian fans here yesterday amid tight security before the first European soccer final to be held in Belgium since the 1985 Heysel disaster in which 39 people died.

They were among thousands of French and Austrian soccer fans pouring into the city for the European Cup Winnersâ\200\231 final between Paris St Germain and Rapid Vienna at the former Heysel stadium, which has been modernised and renamed. :

Police, protesters clash over waste

GORLEBEN, Germany: A truckload of nuclear waste triggered pitched battles between thousands of police and jeering protesters in northern Germany yesterday.

About 50 protesters were injured as the crowd tried to stop the truck moving the shipment of French-processed atomic waste from Dannenberg train station to the Gorleben depot. Police detained 29 people.

Kieht killed in Pakistan blast

LAHORE: Eight people were killed and around 40 injured when a powerful bomb ripped through a bus near here, in Pakistan's third major terrorist attack in a month. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto condemned the "dastardly" attack

at Sheikhpura, some 25km west of the Punjab province capital.

"The harder terrorists try to terrorise the people and the government, the harder will be the government's resolve to deal with them with an iron hand," she said.

On April 28, a bomb exploded on a bus at Bhai Phero near Lahore, killing 52 people. Six people died on April 14 when a bomb exploded in a cancer hospital founded by cricket hero Imran Khan.

Some 137 people have been killed in seven attacks in the past seven months.

Police said five people were killed instantly in the Sheikhpura blast, two died soon after and the eighth died in a Lahore hospital. Nineteen of the injured were listed in "critical" condition.

The bomb was apparently planted under a seat in the bus, a police official said.

"There was a big bang and the tear of the bus was on fire," a Sheikhpura resident said.

As ambulances removed the casualties, police cordoned off the area to allow bomb experts to start their investigation.

Nobody claimed responsibility for the blast. However, Mr Malik Mushtaq Awan, the Punjab Senior Minister, implicitly accused India.

"cominittes, said.

"Mukherjee said yarty

would not, however, resign
from government yet because trends showed no clear winner. â\200\224 Se

He said â\200\234a foreign hand is involved
in such terrorist activities.â\200\235

â\200\234No one but our enemy can commit such a barbarian act,â\200\235 said Awan.

A senior police official said it was a blast â\200\234sponsoredâ\200\235 by the Indian intelligence, Research and Analysis Wing (RAW). Bhutto also blamed the April blasts on RAW,
but India denied this.

The previous bus blast in Punjab coincided with a similar explosion near New Delhi in which 15
people were reported killed.

â\200\234The Indians may have sent a signal to Pakistan that if you play
this game we are capable of retali-
ating on your territory,â\200\235 a western
diplomat said. â\200\224 Sapa-AFP

Swazi king sacks

prime minister.

MBABANE: Swazi King Mswati III said yesterday he was retiring Prime Minister Mblini Dlamini â\200\224 but was not explicit about the reasons.

The king told a public rally: â\200\234The people of Swaziland
are warned to show respect for their culture and traditional authorities.â\200\235

The names of a national council of royal advisers would be announced, he said.

Mswati told the meeting South African President Nelson Mandela, Zimbabwean President Robert Mugabe and Botswanan President Ketumile Masire would visit Swaziland today â\200\234to personally witness Swazilandâ\200\231s unique democracy in actionâ\200\235.

However, Mandelaâ\200\231s spokesman Mr Parks Mankahlana

, Said Mandela would not be visiting the kingdom today.
The president had no plans to visit Swaziland this week, he added.

Most of Swazilandâ\200\231s banned political leadership attended the meeting, expecting the king to announce significant political reforms. â\200\224 Sapa

| No rehabilitation

for nazi objectors

BONN: A political wrangle frustrated efforts yesterday to rehabilitate Germans who turned their backs on Adolf Hitler's army in World War II.

Conservatives and leftist members of parliament failed to agree on a compromise resolution to declare deserters and conscientious objectors were wrongly convicted by nazi military courts.

The failure was a bitter blow for some 300 frail and elderly men still haunted by the ghosts of the nazi era.

The issue is to say symbolically that whoever refused to go along with Hitler and his genocidal, criminal war is no longer a criminal," said Mr Ludwig Baumann, 74.

Opposition Social Democrats and Greens have backed efforts to clear the men's names. But conservatives refuse to lump honest opponents of Hitler together with those

TOULOUSE, France: A spa town in the French Pyrenees has broken legal ground by banning dogs from meeting in public places.

The by-laws, approved by Bagneres-de-Bigorre mayor Mr Roland Castells on Tuesday, are part of a campaign to keep homeless people and beggars, often blamed for owning aggressive dogs, off the streets of the tourist town.

The decree outlaws groups of dogs, even on leads, on squares, car parks and gardens in the town. Dogs on their own are unaffected by the regulations.

Y introduced this by-law after several citizens complained: they had been bitten by dogs running almost free alongside homeless people in the heart of the town, Castells, a centre-right politician, said yesterday.

The new regulation also bans begging during most daylight hours.

Last year several French mayors, mainly in tourist resorts, issued regulations outlawing beggars, stirring a debate about creeping intolerance in France.

Conservative Prime Minister

Alain Juppe denounced the measures as municipal egoism. Reuters

Dock Rd Pizza Factory. Possibly till the millennium.

Dear Ludwig van B,

Donâ\200\231t bother to roll over. Didnâ\200\231t
you hear what I said, Beet? DONâ\200\231T BOTHER TO ROLL OVER. No need at
all. You're still tops in my view and while weâ\200\231re talking, just be grateful
that you reached the age of 30 before
you started going deaf

Had you been growing up in South Africa in this day and age you would have been tone deaf while still at school and stone deaf by your 21st â\200\224 specially if you were a muso
playing in some band.

These guys and dolls performing
at the Dock Rd Pizza Factory on Tuesday night donâ\200\231t understand about sound. They think it has to be loud. LOUD! ALL THE TIME!

You too knew a thing
or two about fortissimos,
but you balanced it with
pianissimos and some other gradations of sound in between. But not this lot.

These eight musicians, and by
your standards that wouldn't even be regarded as a chamber orchestra, belt
out their songs and classic rock numbers with such amplification that you cannot hear the words, cannot even catch the mood of the song, cannot exchange an audible comment about the pizza or pasta you are eating and end up with a sound headache.

People tell me I have this problem because of the generation gap. But the point is Beethoven (and I was amused to read that your name has been spelt Biethoffen, Biethofen, Biethoven, Bethoven, Betthoven and Bethof and that's not counting the variations which we newspaper journalists have sometimes subjected you to) these songs that Duck Chowles, Arthur Petersen and Sharon Seidel-Kometz are singing so enthusiastically, are not songs of the now generation.

ei are songs of my ae

the songs that I rock â\200\231n rolled to and had a ball listening to. And many of the people in the audience on Tuesday night were not youngsters any more either.

So why do you have to make everything so blasted loud? And why do we have to put up with it?

If the sound was marginally softer it would be so much more enjoyable because they are a talented crowd, especially the versatile women.

Judy Brown not only sings, but plays the tenor saxophone, keyboards and the clarinet, and Vanessa Nolan does keyboards, sax, vocals and the violin. They have good legs too. Yup, I thought you'd appreciate that, although I know you werenâ\200\231t much of a womaniser. Like some of your contemps.

Anyway, I wonâ\200\231t labour the point. If they get the message and tone down the sound I'll go again. | enjoyed the grub. The venue is cosy and the ambiance friendly. But if not, then Iâ\200\231ll stay at home and listen to something of yours on my CD.

It could be the Appassionata, or something nice and gentle like the Moonlight Sonata.

But whatever it is, at least Iâ\200\231ll be able to control the volume and | won't have to worry with ae

Stephenson. Soloists: Gudrun

tra, helped along with a few strategically-placed professional players, maintaining its high standards.

The programme opened with the overture Beethoven wrote for Goetheâ\200\231s drama Egmont. The music sketches the story in which the Count of Egmont struggles to free the Netherlands from Spainâ\200\231s tyrannical rule. Trumpets are played to drown out Egmontâ\200\231s final speech before his execution and this gives a marvellously powerful ending to

[: WAS encouraging to hear this mostly-student orchestra the piece.

The overture, as with Beethovenâ\200\231s Symphony No 1 which closed the programme, began tentatively with

in fact,

some scraggy edges to the ensemble, but both ended boldly. The finale of the symphony was,

a most refreshing and joyous performance

that seemed to glow with sunshine. Gudrun Raschen was soloist in Faureâ\200\231s

Elegy. This was not the easiest programme in which to include Faure. His is a musical personality with a special kind of grace and poetry. But Raschenâ\200\231s performance ability won through. She captured the mood of the piece while conductor Stephenson kept a sensitive balance.

Her cello, made to speak with a particularly expressive fluidity of bow, projected warmly.

Two flutes make good companions and Cimarosa, an opera composer who wrote little instrumental music, gave one of his only two concertos to a pair of flutes. Simone

FRIGHTFULLY FUNNY FAIRY: Anna-Mart van der Merwe is Lollie, a dizzy guardian fairy in Toorgeld, one of the four new stories featured in Afrikaans Dramaâ\200\231s new Vierspel

Ill series on SABC2.

PETER FROST

THE third Vierspel series will get off the ground tonight with the screening on SABC2 at 7pm of Geld Wat Stom Is, the first of four self-contained stories.

Vierspel, a concept initiated by Afrikaans drama to provide a platform for new Afrikaans television writing talent, aims to ensure a future for Afrikaans and the drama genre in television.

In previous series, co-ordinators identified worthy writers and directors, but for Vierspel II it was decided to put out an all-points bulletin for artists to submit scripts for selection.

The co-ordinators, drama manager Margaret Goldsmid and producer Paul Kemp, came up with a scenario and asked for submissions based on this theme: a phone call informs a character that he or she had R20-million put into their bank account. Weave a story around it. A short list of six stories was identified from which four were chosen. Geld Wat Stom Is, by Linda Scheepers, is the first of these.

The four stories represent radically different approaches to the brief. Geld is a human drama with elements of comedy, starring Pierre Knoesen as a computer nerd living in a shabby block of flats who falls foul of a corrupt bank manager.

Andre van Deventer and Karen

Inticing
TV dramas

Slabbert's Die Erfgenaam, to be screened on May 15, is, in contrast, a real gothic horror story full of sordid pasts, dark basements and occult overtones. It stars Ryno Hattingh and Tanya Swanepoel.

â€œ Lucky Kops (May 22) by Linda Schoeman takes the cross-cultural route, highlighting the effects of apartheid on love across the colour bar. A poor coloured family is suddenly lifted into the realms of the super-tich, much to the chagrin of the supposed white heir. Gys De Villiers and Charlton George star.

The final piece, Toorgeld on May 29, is the cracker in the series. It's an hilarious comedy spoof which mixes elements of high camp and fantasy with a romantic theme to come out by far the most entertaining of the four. Lollie is old lady Elmien's own private fairy, sent to make things a little easier for the hard-up octogenarian. Lollie has to cope with a corrupt bank manager, some weird fairy laws and a bank clerk who, mysteriously, can see her (most humans, the folklore goes, can't see fairies). Anna-Mart van der Merwe was the fairy and the piece was written by Tienie Botes. Afrikaans drama should be congratulated for continuing the Vierspel concept despite budget butchering. The concept is important (M-Net also has its version, New Directions), but it is unfortunate that no one over in

' SABC English Drama has followed the lead. Because, let's face it, that is where development is sorely needed.

DEADLY ADVICE. Directed by Mandie Fletcher. Starring Jane Horrocks, Brenda Fricker, Imelda
Staunton, Jonathan Price, Edward
Woodward, Billie Whitelaw, Hywel
Bennett, Johnathan Hyde and Sir
John Mills.

CHECK out this fabby cast. Hereâ\200\231s a British gem for everyone whose ever had to sit retching through another tepid American sitcom busting with Barbi/Ken values and moral enlightenment.

Deadly Advice is, gratifyingly, quite the opposite â\200\224:a funny and utterly irreverent comedy about a daughter (Jane Horrocks of

Murder leads to more murder and into the broth are thrown a male stripper, an asthmatic sister and a legion of other quirky characters.

Itâ\200\231s the style of the piece that makes it such a breath of fresh air. Horrocks is superb as the small-town mouse who finally takes control and the rest of the cast deliver performances somewhere between Mony Python and Agatha Christie. Director Fletcher infuses the whole with that dry British understated gentility so effective in a comedy of this sort. Miss it at your pel

NOT one for the kids

small screen in a dark drama laced with } intrigue.

Set on the French
coast and starring
Stephen Dorff

moment) in the role
of Jeremy Graves, it

- centres on a passionate bond he has with his sister which is based somehow on tragic |

events of the past. A detective (Adrian Dun-

in the dangerous atmosphere. It also stars Ab Fab stalwart Joanna Lumley as a dominating matriarch giving a performance a long way
from her flighty comic role in the TV spoof.
Dorff and co-star Gabrielle Anwar of Scent
of a Woman fame set the screen alight with their chemistry and Adrian Dunbar (Crying
