ANC Youth League relaunched

By Brian Sokutu

Deafening chants of "Happy birthday our president!" echoed through the Orlando Stadium, Soweto, on Saturday at the relaunch of the ANC Youth League.

The event co-incided with the 73rd birthday of ANC president Oliver Tambo, who is still in exile.

Close watch

More than 20 000 singing and toyi-toying people from as far afield as the eastern Cape and Transkei attended the rally which saw the Youth League replacing the South African Youth Congress (Sayco).

Police in Casspirs kept a close watch on the proceedings outside the stadium.

Mr Tambo, in a message read out to the crowd, said an important task facing the ANC was to strive to form alliances with other anti-apartheid forces.

"Freedom is indivisible, and so must be the unity of all democratic forces," Mr Tambo said in a message read by human rights lawyer Pius Langa.

"The ANC Youth League has the historic obligation to zealously promote and jealously defend the unity in action of all progressive forces. This we do for the sake of our country and its youth."

The ANC, said Mr Tambo, had survived many decades of ruthless persecution because it had never lost sight of the need to defend unity.

He said some organisations with whom the ANC had to form alliances may not have been identified with the organisation in the past, but they had taken and were continuing to take steps away from apartheid.

"It is our duty to encourage and win them over to the side of the struggle. It is our responsibility to break down barriers of division and create a country where there will be neither whites nor blacks, just South Africans, free and united in diversity."

He urged the youth to be disciplined and called on the League to open the eyes of the youth to reality.

"The education front becomes the most important front of our struggle. It is no longer enough to criticise. Our true values should be measured by our level of creativity."

A banner bearing portraits of Mr Tambo, Nelson Mandela and Walter Sisulu hung prominently next to the podium. In 1944, Mr Tambo, Mr Mandela and Mr Sisulu were founders of the Youth League. It and the ANC were banned in 1960.

The rally was addressed by SACP secretary-general Joe Slovo, foreign affairs spokesman Thabo Mbeki and Cosatu general-secretary Jay Naidoo.

Appointments

Peter Mokaba was appointed provisional chairman of the Youth League.

Other appointments to the provisional executive were: Lyndol Mafole (deputy chairman); Rapu Molekane (secretary-general); Uriel Abrahamse (secretary for administration); Bachana Mokwena (secretary for finance and projects); Ignatius Jacobs (deputy secretary for finance and projects); Tseke Morathi (secretary for student affairs), assisted by Derrick Masoek and Bizana Ngezi; Vusumuzi Mavimbela (secretary for political education), assisted by Phoebe Potgieter; Dipuo Peters (secretary for women's affairs); Kgaogelo Lekgoro (secretary for organisation), assisted by Nyami Boli, Victor Motjope and Sampson Makwetla; Parks Mankahlana (secretary for publicity), assisted by Radithupa Mabitsela, Yacoob Omar and Mpho Lekgoro; Lella McKenna (secretary of arts), assisted by Johnny Sexwale and Mogamotsi Mogodire; Billy Mashele (secretary for labour), assisted by Norman Mashabane and Puso Tladi; Dan Sekonye (secretary for religion) and Sharon Davids (secretary for pioneers).

Seven die in separate unrest incidents

About 5 000 Inkatha supporters staged a rally in central Johannesburg on Saturday, according to a police unrest report.

Protesters were armed with "traditional" weapons. Police reported no incidents and could not confirm reports that journalists covering the rally had been threatened by some Inkatha members.

Grenade

Other unrest-related incidents around the country included the following:

- In Stanger, Natal, an 18-year-old man is in a serious condition in the Augustine Hospital, Durban, after a hand grenade, which he had picked up in a sugar cane field near Blythedale beach, exploded in his hands.
- In Umkomaas, an unknown group of people, armed with pangas and knives, attacked and killed a man at a taxi rank in the town. No arrests were made.

● At Inanda, near Durban, a man was stabbed and hacked to death by a group of unknown people. No arrests were made.

Also at Inanda, a house was petrol bombed. No one was injured and no arrests were made.

● In Lamontville, Durban, one person was shot dead by a group of unknown people. No arrests were made.

● In Jouberton near Klerksdorp two illegal gatherings took place. Police reported no incidents.

● At Wessellon, near Ermelo, an F1 hand grenade was flung at a home and caused slight damage. No one was injured and no arrests were made.

● Police reported two stone-throwing incidents in Bloemfontein.

● In Soweto, a man was stabbed and hacked to death by a group of about 100 youths at Naledi Station on Saturday morning. Police have arrested several people in connection with the incident. They are to appear in court today.

● One man is in a serious condition in Baragwanath Hospital after he was attacked and stabbed by a crowd of about 70 youths at Orlando Station. A police helicopter spotted the attack and intervened, saving the man's life. Soweto police liaison officer Colonel Tienie Haigryn said.

The Nansfield hostels near Orlando stadium were also stoned, he added.

● A man was shot dead and another was wounded, following a mob attack on a black prison warder at We-pener in the Free State on Thursday, police confirmed yesterday.

Free State police liaison officer, Major Johan Fouche, said the prison warder was on his way to work when he was attacked and stabbed in the hand by a group of unknown assailants.

He managed to escape to the house of a policeman who accompanied him to the prison where they were confronted by a mob armed with pangas and knives.

Warning shot

The policeman fired a warning shot into the air and another into the ground in front of the crowd, "presumably killing one man", Major Fouche said.

He added police were later informed that a man was "lying dead in the Botshabelo Hospital".

The prison warder had been treated and discharged from hospital, he added. — Sapa

ANC, DP debate joint strategy in Free State

By Esmaré van der Merwe
Political Reporter

In a unique local initiative, Democratic Party and ANC structures in the Free State last week started discussions on joint regional strategies to promote the creation of a democratic and non-racial dispensation.

DP and ANC leaders met in Bloemfontein last week following the adoption of a resolution at the recent DP provincial congress to "negotiate regional joint strategies with the ANC aimed at building a broad non-racial democratic alliance/pact" to encourage the move towards the creation of a new South Africa.

A member of the DP's Free State/Northern Cape executive and of the DP's national council, Dirk du Toit, said this initiative was in line with the DP's programme of action of seeking closer ties with the ANC and the National Party.

Negotiations

The programme of action committed the DP to the development of a broad front for peaceful co-operation and alliances with organisations within and outside Parliament which were pursuing the objectives of negotiations and reconciliation.

Professor du Toit described the meeting as "cordial", adding that both delegations strongly advocated their principles.

"One of the issues discussed was to establish a joint unrest monitoring and prevention committee. A large number of the DP's black executive members were present," he said.

"Both the ANC and the DP will report back to their constituencies. The only definite decision which was taken was that a follow-up meeting will take place before the year end."

DP sources said the resolution to seek closer ties with the ANC had been taken after DP leader Zach de Beer had left the DP conference. They suspected that he would not be "too happy" about the initiative.
