ill paves way for new-style Cabinet
THE Constitution
Amendment Bill made provision for the appointment as Cabinet Ministers of people not yet represented in Parliament. said the Deputy Minister of Constitutional Development.
Dr Tertius Delport
Introducing the Second Reading debate on the Bill. he said the novemment did not intend to pre-empt the negotiation process.

Such appointments to the Cabinet would only be made if and when jus-Bill will allow judges to reopen inquests
THE Inquest: Amendment Bill was further proof of the government's sincere commitment to open and honest ernment. said the Deputy Minister of Justice. Mr Danie Schutte.

Introducing the Second
Reading debate on the Bill. he said the Bill took the initiatives regarding inquest! further by making it possible for an inquest to be reopened with a judge at the Constitutional Court. despite the fact that the particular inquest had previously been handled with a magistrate as presiding judicial officer.
The Bill was supported by all parties.

Mr Tony Leon (DP Houghton) said the Bill to reopen eeru inquests which litter the history of sult of the 1994 election of the ANC. "It state clean but we need to do so on an informed belief. The Bill

Mr Lester Fuchs (DP

would support the Bill because in essence it would bring in new justice led by development: in the negotiation process.

These intentions would be made at the pleasure of the State President and such Ministers would be answerable to the President. The Bill also abolishes the requirement that a Minister become a Member of Parliament within 12 months of his appointment. 1

A further provision allows the State President to appoint an Acting State President in his absence and permit: the oath adopted by an Acting State President to remain valid in respect of subsequent appointment to that position.
