INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS LAW CONFERENCE

University of the Witwatersrand
Senate Chamber

Saturday 2nd of October 1993

A one-day conference designed to provide you with essential facts about international Human Rights law ... and its relevance for a changing South Africa.

Addressed by top international speakers
as well as local experts.

THE CONFERENCE

For over forty years South Africa has been isolated from the international community. As a result it is not a party to any international human rights convention and has not felt the influence of international human rights law. This situation is about to change - dramatically. South Africa is about to adopt a Bill of Rights that draws heavily on the jurisprudence of contemporary international human rights conventions. In January of this year South Africa signed (but still has to ratify) a number of human rights conventions, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention against Torture.

In the foreseeable future therefore, South African lawyers will be required to interpret a Bill of Rights modeled on international human rights conventions and to advise clients on their rights arising from international human rights conventions incorporated into South African law. Likewise members of the judiciary will have to increasingly preside over cases in which the influence of international human rights is felt. Members of political parties and non-governmental organisations will also be required to be conversant with the essentials of international human rights law.

International human rights law will soon cease to be a matter of mere academic interest and will become an essential feature of South African law and politics.

In order to introduce lawyers, members of the judiciary, diplomats and politicians to this jurisprudence, a conference is to be held under the auspices of Lawyers for Human Rights, Students for Human Rights of the University of the Witwatersrand and the newly formed South African branch of the International Law Association. This one-day conference will be held on Saturday the 2nd of October 1993.

THE SPEAKERS

The conference will be addressed by international experts and recognised world authorities in the field of International Human Rights Law. They will represent important institutions such as the United Nations Centre for Human Rights in Geneva, the International Commission of Jurists, the European Commission for Human Rights and the Organisation of African Unity. South African experts will also address the Conference.
